Council rejects seniors housing plan

Gosford Council rejected a proposal for a seniors housing and aged care facility, with 126 units, at Empire Bay.

The council has resolved that the planning proposal was inconsistent with a number of Council policies and plans including the State Environment Planning Policy, Community Strategic Plan-Gosford 2025 and Biodiversity Strategy.

Council also decided to write to the Minister for Mental Health and Ageing Mr Mark Butler, parliamentary secretary for Health and Ageing Ms Catherine King and Minister for Ageing and Disability Services Mr Andrew Constance regarding the exceptionally high costs involving the provision of residential care for older people.

It will urge the government to create incentives to make it financially viable for developers to provide this form of housing in urban areas.

The matter was considered by Council at its meeting of Tuesday, February 14, only to be deferred to the meeting held Tuesday, April 3.

In a report prepared by the council's environment and planning directorate the planning proposal was described as inconsistent with the general and specific aims of State Environment Planning Policy No 19-Bushland in Urban Areas as the site, located at Lot 1 Empire Bay Dr, was covered by large, mature forest scale trees that exhibited an open forest structure.

"This vegetation provides habitat for a range of threatened and non threatened fauna species.

"Any proposed aged care facility would result in extensive tree and habitat loss.

"The value of the bushland has been weighed up against the social and economic values and it is considered that given the above environmental concerns, other locations that are more centrally located to town and village centres should be considered for this land use.'

The planning proposal was also contrary, according to Council staff, to the intent of the State Environment Planning Policy as residents would need to have facilities to access shops, banks, community services, recreation facilities and general practitioners.

"'Access' means being located not more than 400 metres from these services or from transport able to take residents to these services.

"Such access to these services or to the transport source is to be by a sealed footpath with a suitable

"The nearest and only services in the immediate vicinity of the site are the general store-service station at Empire Bay which is 500 metres distant.

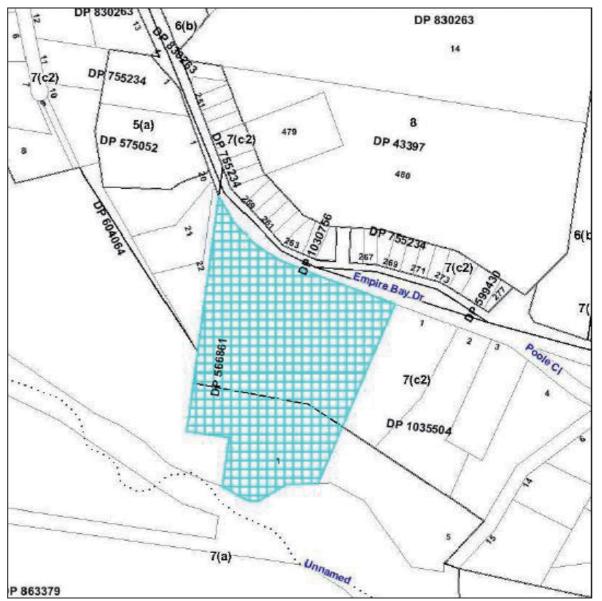

"There is no footpath to facilitate pedestrian access.'

Mayor Cr Laurie Maher voted against his fellow councillors and in favour of the development, using the retirement village in South Kincumber as an example of how not all retirement villages were in walking distance to shops and other facilities.

Council staff, however, stated in the report that the land was "simply not the right place".

"The land is not even on the edge of the urban footprint as it does not adjoin an urban zone.

"In fact it is 560 metres from the urban zones of Empire Bay and 1.5 km from the urban zones of

"The main reason the applicant has provided for justification of this planning proposal for seniors housing at Empire Bay is the current and future lack of seniors housing on the Woy Woy

"This alone is not a strategic planning justification for locating, what is essentially an urban use, on land that is zoned for Conservation and Scenic Protection purposes and acts as a 'green' buffer between settlements.

"The location of such a use outside of the existing urban footprint is contrary to approved Council strategies such as the Community Strategic Plan and Biodiversity Strategy."

No NBN for three and a half years

National Broadband Network your area from September 2014 in fibre optic services are not expected to be available on the Peninsula for at least three and a half years, with parts of the Peninsula not getting services before July 2016 - over four years away.

Despite our front page report last issue stating that the rollout on the Peninsula starts this month, work will not actually start on the Peninsula under the first three year rollout plan until September 2014 at the earliest, with work on some parts of the Peninsula not starting within three years at all, according to the NBN company website.

"We will commence work in phases with last work scheduled to commence in June 2015," the website stated.

"It is estimated that the average time from work beginning to NBN services being available is 12 months.'

The Peninsula News report stated incorrectly that work in listed Peninsula areas would start between April 1 and June 30.

The report was based on a media release from the Member for Robertson Ms Deborah O'Neill, which included Gosford and other areas within her electorate where work is expected to start this month.

work would start in all listed areas up to June 30, 2015.

The year was omitted from our report.

It also referred readers to the NBN website. This reference was also omitted from our report.

"We were wrong to omit these details from our report," said Peninsula News editor Mr Mark

"These details were not included in the item I was editing," he said.

"We ask that items submitted to Peninsula News are just about the Peninsula.

We do not cover areas beyond our own locality.

"All items submitted are vetted The media release stated that for relevance to our Peninsula readers before they are forwarded

"Any references to areas outside the Peninsula are removed and sections are rewritten in an attempt to ensure statements accurately reflect plans for the Peninsula.

"In this case, our process failed and relevant details were also removed?

Mr Snell said the media release from Ms O'Neill's office was. nevertheless, misleading in that services under the so-called "first three year rollout plan" were not actually expected to be available on the Peninsula for up to four and a quarter years, and work in some parts of the Peninsula would not start within three years.

Peninsula News put in a request with Ms O'Neill's for clarification of timing of the work on the Peninsula for this edition.

No response had been received before we went to press.

"The bottom line is that, in this case, I did not apply the maxim: If it sounds too good to be true, it probably is," said Mr Snell.

"A rollout of NBN on the Peninsula starting this month was just too good to be true.

"I did not double check the facts. "I should have.

"I take full responsibility."

Woy Woy Bay is focus of clean-up efforts

Local clean-up activist Mr Graham Johnston of MacMasters Beach Surf Club has focused his ongoing efforts on Woy Woy Bay.

Based on a survey he had conducted two weeks earlier, the area was identified as potentially being the worst polluted foreshore his cleanup program had yet encountered.

Joined by participants from the MacMasters Beach Junior Surf Club and the Brisbane Water Oyster Growers on Wednesday, April 11, Mr Johnston's cleanup group removed a wheelie bin, 13 large oyster trays, 29 tyres, 50 full bags of plastic items, hundreds of tennis balls and many beer bottles and pieces of foam from the area.

Mr Johnston said that it appeared as if the bulk of the small litter had washed into the bay from storm water drains.

He went on to note that the weight and stress that this litter had placed on the shore bed had destroyed the root systems of the native plant life. In total, a tonne of rubbish was collected from the 150 metres of foreshore, and Mr Johnston has said that there is plenty more to come from a second layer of litter uncovered from underneath washed up sea grass.

Eight hundred kilograms of the day's waste were deposited at Woy Woy tip, however, a Council policy of only accepting four tyres per load meant that the rest had to be stored at the National Parks' depot.

Junior participant Nichole Jackson recorded the day's events with a video camera, the footage of which will be distributed to relevant stakeholders.

Mr Johnston is seeking advice from State Fisheries regarding the damage that unwanted oyster trays and other plastic products are doing to Brisbane Waters' local mangroves.

Further funding is being requested to ensure that the task can be completed and the cleanliness of the area maintained.

Marine Rescue active over Easter

Guns stolen in house-breaking

The volunteers from Marine Rescue Central Coast were rostered for duties during the entire Easter long weekend.

On Good Friday, the duty crew assisted three vessels.

The rescue boat, Centaco 011, was flagged down at around 11.20am by two people on board a cabin runabout off Noonan's Point.

The vessel's engine had failed and the men requested a tow to Gosford boat ramp, which skipper Norm Smith and his crew provided.

Centaco 011 was again flagged down at midday when it reached the Blackwall Channel.

Two men and four children in a 5.5 metre bow-rider had a mechanical problem and needed help to get back to Lions Park at Woy Woy.

The Newcastle Police called upon the Central Coast unit at 3pm to assist a man in a cabin timber who had unsuccessfully launched on the Saratoga side of Paddy's Channel.

With skipper Bren Weston in charge, Centaco 011 located the vessel stuck in an oyster lease and towed it to the wharf at Koolewong.

The boat was equipped with a marine radio.

However, the owner said that he did not know how to use it and had therefore phoned emergency services for assistance instead.

On Easter Saturday, a radio request for assistance was received at around 11.30am, transmitted from a man who could not restart the engine on his five metre outboard runabout in Paddy's Channel.

Duty skipper Cameron Veacock on Centaco 011 towed the vessel to the Restella Ramp at Davistown.

Around midday, the crew received another radio call to assist an eight metre Bayliner cruiser with a mechanical failure near The Rip Bridge with six people onboard.

The crew assisted the boat in its return to Lions Park at Woy Woy.

Finally, on Easter Monday, just after 10.30am, skipper Ted Leeson on Centaco 011 responded to a marine radio call from a 4.9m vessel at East Reef which was in trouble with an overheating engine.

The Gillard Labor Government

GIVING PENSIONERS A HELPING HAND

The Gillard Labor Government has delivered an increase to the pension – the sixth pension increase since September 2009.

More than 27,900 Central Coast pensioners have received a boost to their payments to help them keep up with living costs.

Since 2009, the maximum pension rate has increased by $154 a fortnight for singles and $156 a fortnight for couples combined.

We are doing this because we know pensioners on the Coast have the least room to move in their budgets. It's why we acted to increase the pension and reform the system, and it's why we are boosting the pension again from May.

More Money in Your Pocket

- Singles on the maximum pension rate will receive an increase in their pension of $6.70 a fortnight. Couples will receive an increase in their pension of $10.00 a fortnight combined.
- The new maximum rate including the base rate and pension supplement, are:
 - $755.50 a fortnight for singles, and
 - •$1,139.00 a fortnight for couples combined.
- From May, Labor will deliver another pension boost. We'll give single pensioners about $338 extra per year, and couple pensioners about $510 extra per year combined.
- Since our reforms in September 2009, Labor has delivered increases to the maximum pension of about $154 a fortnight for singles and about $156 a fortnight for couples combined.

English journalists visit Peninsula News

Two journalists from England visited Peninsula News last month and learnt about the success and challenges of running a not-for-profit newspaper.

Buckinghamshire-based Andrew Kay and Bedfordshirebased Steve Knowles met Peninsula News editor Mr Mark Snell as part of a month-long international exchange".

Sponsored by Rotary, the two newspaper reporters spent time with media organisations across Sydney and the Central Coast.

A team from NSW will travel to the UK to take part in the reverse leg of the exchange next month.

During their visit, the pair learnt about Peninsula News' aim of providing an independent voice for the area, how the paper was designed and complied, and the unique way it was distributed to businesses and given away in places like shopping centres and libraries.

Mr Kay, 31, who writes for Aylesbury-based newspaper The Bucks Herald, said: "It was fascinating to spend time with the team, which is made up of volunteers and a few paid staff members."

"I enjoyed finding out about the paper's aims and the team's genuine passion for local news.

"Being used to writing for a newspaper which is a business, it was interesting to see what is being achieved on a not-for-profit basis by Peninsula News both in print and online.

"I enjoyed learning about the history of the paper: how it started out and grew up to become an independent voice for the area.

"As a journalist, you are very privileged, because you come into contact with all sorts of amazing and inspiring people who are really making a difference. "I felt the team at Peninsula News certainly fit that category.

"I would also like to say a big thank you to Rotary International for allowing me to take part in the Group Study Exchange.

"It is designed to show young professionals how their professions are practiced abroad and offer an insight into another culture.

"Since being downunder, I have also witnessed firsthand the huge amount of work that Rotary clubs across the area have been doing such as fundraising for local charities and towards Rotary International's aim of trying to eradicate polio.

"It was great to spend time at Peninsula News and to see that the hard work taking place in the community, by groups such as Rotary, does not go unreported."

Rosalyn exhibits in Woy Woy

Rosalyn McMahon will have her artwork exhibited in a Woy Woy cafe this month.

Included in her exhibition are hand painted cards and small paintings with a natural history theme.

Pastels depicting the autumn and winter seasons as well as larger paintings in water colour and acrylic with scenes from local landscapes, Sydney and Kent, UK, will also be on display.

"I recently finished a project at the Peninsula Women's Health Centre working with three other ladies on the rain water tank," said Ms McMahon.

"The art mural looks beautiful and we learned a lot from our teacher.

"However, when it finished I was keen to get involved with more art.

"It was fortunate Gnostic Mana rang me letting me know it was my turn to exhibit.

"It's a lovely atmosphere in the cafe, good music, good visitors and good staff.

Peninsula Village resident dies

Peninsula Village resident Mr Charles Henry Flanders Pearce died on February 24, "surrounded by the things and people he loved and cherished," said his eldest daughter Ms Jayne Mote.

Mr Pearce was born on March 3. 1915, In Swindon Wiltshire, England.

Ms Mote said that the name Flanders came from the fact that his father was fighting there at the time of

"He did not meet his father until he was three years of age and was the youngest boy in a family of four children."

School years were not particularly happy or successful for him so he left at the age of 14 to work with a firm of electricians for the grand sum of five shillings a week.

In those days the wireless worked by an accumulator.

This was charged with electricity similar to a car battery.

The accumulators contained acid, which burnt his trousers and his first week's wages was spent on overalls, which cost four shillings and 11 pence.

His next job was with a company who made uniforms.

He was employed as a strap boy, repairing the leather straps, which operated the sewing machines and earned about eight shillings a week.

It was here that he met a young girl who was later to become his wife.

Charles fell for her immediately but it was not until they were both 18 some four years later they started walking out together.

Not long after this, Charles began working with the Great Western Railways.

Under union arrangements, all apprentices were automatically sacked upon reaching the age of 21

During this period, the foreman and the shop clerk took notice of Charles, as his work ethics were great.

They suggested that he "could do better" and suggested he become a

This would take some years as he had a lot of study to do in order to pass the entrance examination. He was unemployed for a while but eventually managed to secure a series of shortterm employment.

He then secured permanent work in another town with a motor firm as a plater improver.

The Second World War was already being talked about and he was transferred to the blacksmiths shop where he made Bren gun carriers.

By this time he had submitted his application to join the Wiltshire Constabulary.

The entrance examination was held over two days and he passed all subjects with flying colors, and so, he became a probationary constable in June 1939.

Initial training was for three months but he was required to remain on probation for two years

By this time he was courting his beloved Margaret and after a courtship of six years they decided to

Charles had to apply to the chief constable of Wiltshire for permission to marry Margaret.

Margaret in turn had to supply references to the chief constable as to her good character.

In addition, Charles had to provide evidence that he had sufficient savings in order to furnish a room.

Permission was eventually granted and they married in August 1941 aged

As the wife of a police officer, Margaret had to give up her working life once they were married.

However, she was allowed to participate in war work and became a fire watcher.

Charles applied to join the Royal Navy once the war looked set to last

This was turned down, as the police force was a reserved occupation.

After the war a police house became available to them and so they moved to a tiny village called Keevil.

Charles became 'the village bobby'.

The house had no electricity but they were able to purchase calor gas for lighting, which was delivered weekly in cylinders.

Naturally, there was no washing machine either, only a brick copper with a metal lining, with the water being heated by an open fire underneath.

Their second daughter Carole was born in Keevil in 1947.

Charles had to cover his beat by bicycle, in a series of shifts 6am to 2pm, 2pm to 10pm and 10pm to 6am.

There were no mobile phones or any other form of communication other than public phone boxes.

In order to ensure the police were doing their job properly, head office would ring a series of different phone boxes each hour and of course they

Charles remained a village constable all his career, a position he said he loved but life was very hard being on call 24-7.

Retirement from the force was compulsory after reaching 30 years

In 1970 Charles signed on for one round trip as Master at Arms with the Shaw Saville shipping line.

By this time his eldest daughter had taken up residence in Australia.

This gave Charles an opportunity to see a little of the country and to meet his son-in-law of the time.

Upon his return to the UK he was so full of Sydney he and Margaret decided to come for a holiday.

Their visa allowed them to stay for Both gained employment, Charles as handyman for a private hospital in Ashfield and Margaret with Nock and Kirby's in the City.

They returned to England full of life in Australia.

They soon sold their home and immigrated to Australia arriving in July

It didn't take long before they had purchased a unit in Croydon Park and Charles returned to his old job as Handyman at Ashfield Private Hospital.

Over the years they embraced the Australian way of life, meeting friends who would become lifelong.

They played indoor bowls and enjoyed Saturday night dances at the local Club.

With friends they purchased a caravan and together spent six weeks every Christmas at Sussex Inlet.

Over the years they moved house a couple of times following their daughter and her husband and moved to Glenmore Park.

Jayne moved to the Central Coast in 1998 and at that time they didn't think they would move again.

In early 2001 Margaret's health started to decline, Charles cared for her as long as he could but eventually Margaret needed full time care and was placed in a home at St Mary's.

Charles visited every day but lost his driving license at the age of 90.

In 2004 Charles' own health started to decline and he could no longer care for himself.

He was spending more and more time with Jayne, but not ever with a desire to become a burden upon her

The hunt began for accommodation for Charles and he was introduced to Peninsula Village.

"I wish I could go in for a day to see what it's like before I make such a commitment," he said.

After a conversation with the Village it was decided that Charles would spend a week in respite with them.

He was installed at the first availability and left to his own devices.

His family said in order for him to make his own mind up they would not contact him unless he asked for help.

After a couple of days he phoned his daughters saying "this is a wonderful place I wish Margaret and I had known about it earlier, we would have come in together".

His name was added to the waiting list and when Don Leggett House opened in August 2005 he entered as a hostel care resident.

Once more he embraced his changed circumstances enthusiasm and joined in the entire activities offered.

After a few weeks a vacancy in the nursing home became available and Charles was asked if he would like to have Margaret transferred from St Mary's thereby he could see her daily.

He readily agreed to the suggestion.

Sadly, Margaret only lived about six weeks.

Charles had always wanted to take out Australian Citizenship but could never persuade Margaret to do so.

On January 26, 2006, Charles became an Australian Citizen at a ceremony held in Hyde Park, Sydney.

This was televised and, as Charles was the oldest participant, he was interviewed for television.

"He was so proud the next morning walking into the dining room at Don Leggett House," said Ms Mote.

"The cheer went up "Good on ya

Charles continued enjoying his life at Peninsula Village and made several Doll's Houses, one for his great granddaughter, with the others being raffled by Peninsula Village.

"The staff at the Peninsula Village were wonderful and gave him fabulous care," said Ms Mote.

A drop in the bucket

In her letter dated February 20, Colleen Boyd suggested that people who don't live in Umina should be excluded from debating the possibility of a Maccas franchise in Umina.

Does that mean that Mr Mussali, who does not live in Umina, should withdraw his DA?

Colleen and I agree on this point.

Alleged sponsorship from Maccas is a drop in the bucket compared to funds raised from sideline activities.

Is saving Maccas important than promoting local amateur sporting clubs?

I have tasted steak sandwiches, sausage sandwiches and egg and bacon rolls from Gwandalan to Mangrove Mountain and on to Umina and the worst meal I encountered is 10 times tastier than anything that Maccas offer.

The coastline needs defences

Australian Museum Sydney has an interpretive sign that states "in a world increasingly affected by climate change, sea level rise and ocean acidification, it is important that we get to know as much about marine areas as possible".

On January 3, the Newcastle Herald reported on beach erosion affecting six surf club's along the NSW coastline.

Two of the clubs mentioned. Killcare and Copacabana, are in our local area.

I have asked premier Barry O'Farrell how the government was preparing for the loss of these surf clubs and the danger to other club in the "zones of potential instability".

Twelve weeks have passed and the premier, Minister for Heritage and Minister for the Environment have failed to respond.

Does the government have an existing methodological planned retreat for the coast line?

Head of State should be Australian

Don Parkes somewhat misrepresents my views (Peninsula News, 2 April 2012) when he quotes my saying that "it would be hard to suggest there is a better existing (political) model ... that we could adopt".

In fact, I went on to say that, regardless of our good past performance, there were details of the system that could be drastically

Probably, the most obvious example would be that we have a head of state who lives on the other side of the world, is not an Australian and takes not the slightest interest in us, except for an occasional condescending visit.

How we could select a better head of state is an open question, but the principle that the head of state should be Australian and have a primary focus on the wellbeing of this country would seem to be difficult for any sensible person to dispute.

The pitfalls of the American presidential system are so exposed that it's difficult to see a majority of Australians accepting it.

Dividing the legislative and executive functions of government is so irrational and inefficient that it is extraordinary to realize that a group of seriously committed political pragmatists once adopted it as the best template for a country.

As to Klaas Woldring's contention that extra-parliamentary department heads bring greater expertise to the management of programs than parliamentary ministers, it would be interesting if he could point to some concrete examples of where this has happened.

The American experience suggests that most Cabinet Secretaries are little more than political hacks, and the operation of governmental programs in America does not indicate any notable superiority of performance resulting from direction by a nonelected head, rather the opposite in most cases.

As everyone knows, the real management of departments is undertaken by each one's permanent head, and the titular head (Minister or Cabinet Secretary) is almost entirely in the hands of his advisers for information, ideas and even the very words that he speaks in his office.

This is why the business of government is relatively unaffected by changes at the top (I don't say that Sir Humphrey is a real-life figure, but there is enough truth in his representation to make the situation recognizable to the general public), as any Minister for Defence soon finds out.

If anyone doubts this, it would be pertinent to ask how Belgium has managed to continue on almost unchanged, despite its not having had a Government for more than a year past.

A head of state who represents us but has limited political powers would seem to be acceptable to most Australians (after all, that's what we have now).

I doubt that anybody wants to fall into the American trap of having a head of state who is also the apex political figure of the country, the conflicts that thus arise are

The question is how to achieve this goal?

In a popular election, there is the horrendous prospect that Alan Jones or, even, Clive "Living Treasure" Palmer would sweep Marie Bashir away.

There is also the question of whether the head of state should be a lifetime appointment, the monarchists would have us believe that there is no use-by date for a royal incumbent, so why should it be any different for anyone else?

Don Parkes is correct in saying that republicans have divided views on these matters, and what is needed is a serious debate about them not glib referendum questions designed to be divisive.

As a final suggestion, in case Australians opt to continue with the monarchy, I'd suggest that we offer the post to King Vincent I.

He probably doesn't have much better to look forward to and, at least, he can claim to be a dinkum Aussie, while still providing a blueblooded figure that the forelocktuggers can kowtow to.

8 Principles of Health in the Recovery for the Sick

NOT TO BE MISSED!

The medical profession cannot always cure disease, but the human body has the amazing ability to recover in the right environment. Restorative power is not in drugs, but in nature's remedies Unhealthful conditions can be changed, wrong habits corrected and right conditions in the body system reestablished.

Nature's process of restoration and surrender of hurtful indulgences requires sacrifice. But the rewards are well worth the effort of turning your life around.

Karen Hodge, a registered nurse, who was diagnosed as having Multiple Sclerosis, is recovering from this serious illness by following these same health principles. Karen now seeks to impart the knowledge of these health principles and their application to a lifestyle of recovery from disease in its many forms.

Ms Hodge said that, as a registered nurse, she was aware that there was no known cure for multiple sclerosis, and therefore she chose to study Ellen G. White's eight principles of health instead.

Ms Hodge said that she had consistently refused all medication, and yet had seen her condition continue to improve in spite of this due to her practice of the book's eight principles, now only experiencing numbness in her hands.

"Everyone wants to enjoy good health but we are confused about where to get good sound advice," said Ms Hodge.

"Unfortunately we look in all the wrong places and end up spending a small fortune in the process.

"One of the main reasons for the world's crippling health crisis is the unhealthy lifestyle practices which invite an assortment of degenerative lifestyle diseases.

"It is time to take responsibility for your own health.

Survivors share experiences of life after cancer

Cancer survivors will front a special Cancer Council group session in Woy Woy on Sunday, May 12, where they will share their experiences on coping with life after cancer with local survivors.

On the Central Coast, around 2014 people are diagnosed with cancer each year.

More than 60 per cent of people treated for the disease survive and many face challenges adapting to life afterwards, which can also affect their families and loved ones.

Sandra Shorrock from Cancer Council's Central Coast Region Office said that cancer survivors often viewed the world differently after treatment, due to emotional and social impacts of the disease, coupled with the changes in their appearance and body function.

"Life after cancer can be a confronting and challenging time," she said.

"Many survivors feel as though others don't understand what they have gone through, and others suffer from problems like depression and fatigue.

"But, it's important to realise you're not alone.

"We're encouraging anyone who's affected by cancer to book their place in this free session to connect with others who have been through a similar experience.

"Attendees will benefit from tips, ideas, and activities which may help them to live their life well after cancer."

The session is also open to carers, family, friends and work colleagues of those who have been affected by cancer.

"They too can feel very deep impact from their loved one's diagnosis and the effects of diagnosis and treatment," said Ms Shorrock.

To date, almost 1400 people have attended Living Well after Cancer workshops across NSW.

The Living Well After Cancer program is held throughout the state and run by Cancer Council NSW with specially trained cancer survivors.

Bookings are free essential, phone 1300 200 558.

In order to understand more about Chiropractic, firstly you must get to know more about your body. Your nervous system is the communication system between your brain and your body's muscles, organs, tissues and glands.

For your body to remain healthy, your nervous system must function well. For your nervous system to function well, it must be free of interference.

This system relays information to tell your heart how slow or fast to pump, your stomach when to digest, your limbs how or when to move etc. In fact most of these processes occur every second of every day without you even being aware of it.

So where do chiropractors fit in to all of this? The body, when it's moving, is continually adjusting to information from its surroundings and ever changing environment. Your nervous system must be free of interference in order to allow efficient and effective movement to occur.

Spinal subluxations/joint dysfunctions, tight or fatigued muscles, weak ligaments, arthritic joints, flat feet, rigid joints, all can send altered information to the brain. The brain in turn processes this false information and as a result can send the incorrect message out to the body, leading to consistently inappropriate or potentially damaging movements.

Dr. Seth Sharpless at the University of Colorado demonstrated that as little as the weight of a 5 cent piece on a nerve has the potential to decrease the nerve impulse by as much as 60%. Could you imagine how poorly functioning or unhealthy your body would be if various organs or muscles were only getting 40% of the Raising funds for umbilical cord blood research

Members of the Inner Wheel Club of Gosford North will be raising money for Coin for a Cord day at Woy Woy train station on Friday, May 14, from 6am.

They will be out in their yellow aprons, selling grandma and grandpa teddy bears, pens, yoyos, shopping bags and key charms to raise funds for the project.

Coins for a Cord raises funds for umbilical cord blood research within Australia and since starting in 2000 has generated funds of over $1.5 million supporting 27 research projects to date.

Cord blood research focuses on how cord blood stem cell transplants can help critically ill children such as those with leukaemia.

The umbilical cord is the lifeline between mother and baby during pregnancy and cord blood is the blood left behind in the umbilical cord and is usually discarded after childbirth.

It now can be donated at specific hospitals.

WHAT DOES "SHEN YUN" MEAN?

CHINESE IS AN IMMENSELY rich language. Many characters contain deep inner meanings and nuances that are difficult to translate into English, such as those in our very name: Shen Yun.

The character Shen (神) is a general term for "divine" or "divine being." Chinese cosmology, in fact, is replete with hundreds of deities, Buddhas, and Taoist immortals who play different roles and color the canon of Chinese history with thousands of rich stories.

This feeling of the divine plays into the second character of our name: Yun (韻). Its meaning is far greater than what literal translation can capture. "Yun" refers to the overall manner of a dancer, a dancer's style, and the meaning behind his or her movements.

So, when we put "Shen" and "Yun" together: it's about the grace, compassion, and sublime beauty of heavenly realms that are shown through the subtlest expressions and gestures of our dancers. That is the essence of the name "Shen Yun."

HEN YUN—it's a grand production. Every year we start fresh. Every detail matters. Our goal? Not just another show. We take our craft beyond the boundaries of performing arts as you know it.

A Shen Yun show is a fusion of classical arts with modern appeal. As one audience member put it, "It's like a fashion show, opera, concert, and dance performance all rolled into one." Difficult? Yes. Impossible? No. Our passion motivates us to bring all these elements together into one extraordinary experience.

Classical Chinese dance lies at the heart of our performances. The dancers—with what some have called "limitless bodies"—turn an intensely difficult art form into something beautiful and effortless. China's 5,000 years of civilization provide an endless source of inspiration. The choreographers work closely with the composers to recreate ancient stories and legends, or convey an aspect of the culture, through short pieces that last no more than a few minutes. Our graphic artists, meanwhile, use advanced digital technology to produce stunning animated backdrops that correspond precisely to each dance.

After seeing the show, one audience member marveled, "This production... is nothing short of a miracle."

"Their passion is really touching."

— Chi Cao, Principal Dancer of Birmingham Royal Ballet and lead actor in Mao's Last Dancer

"It is really out of this world!

If I had to describe it, the words might be 'divine,' 'reborn,' and 'hope.'"

— Christine Walevska, master cellist

"A beautiful show... fantastic!"

— Joy Behar, Co-host of ABC's The View

"I don't know how many hundreds of performers are involved in this. But between the musicians, the performers, the number of costume changes, the extent of the lighting, the writing, the effects, there's almost no show like this anywhere."

- J.B. Miller, CEO of Empire Entertainment & Emmy Award-winning

"Nothing short of a miracle." "Truly nourishes and lifts the spirit..."

Throat singing features at Troubadour folk club

The Troubadour Folk Club will hold its next concert on Saturday, April 28, at the Woy Woy CWA Hall with tuition from Christina and Chris Sainsbury and a performance from Bukhchuluun Ganburged (Bukhu).

The singing workshop will kick off the night from 5pm until 6:15pm and will consist of singing techniques and singing warm ups as well as instruction on singing two or three songs in three or four part harmony which will be performed at the following concert from 7pm.

Ms Sainsbury has been running choirs and singing workshops on the Central Coast for a number of years, including the Bouddi Voice Choir and Shakti Women's Choir.

She is well known for her kirtan (yogic singing of mantras) and has also sung in jazz, world music and art music ensembles.

She studied singing at the University of New England Northern Rivers where she completed her Bachelor of Arts in 1991 and then later completed a Graduate Diploma in Music Therapy at the University of Technology Sydney.

She is now working as a music therapist on the Central Coast.

Bukhu, a masters student of the Music and Dance Conservatory of Ulaanbaatar, will kick off the 7pm concert with his folk music of Mongolia.

He said that, in his music, he explores the aural dimensions of sounds generated by traditional instruments and harmonic overtone vocal techniques.

He aimed to present a contemporary take on the tradition of Mongolian bards of the middle ages and those of ancient times, acting as a national memory bank by working mythologies, historic figures and events into traditional verse form.

A cultural ambassador of his country, Bukhu combines Morin Khurr (horse head fiddle) and Khuumii (harmonic overtone throat singing) skills to transmit the harmony of Mongolian shamanic culture through time and space, said folk club publicity office Ms Willy Timmerman.

"He embodies the spirit of reinterpreted narratives through verse which is key to the enchanting powers of folk traditions, combined with influences from contemporary music woven into the fabric of these arrangements," she said.

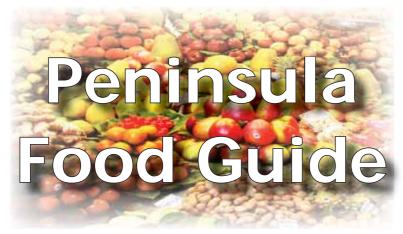

"An accomplished composer of contemporary music in his own right, Bukhu's songs incorporate elements of genres as diverse as overtone throat singing, harmonic chant, folk, classical, blues, metal and, more recently, electronic and hip-hop."

He has played for audiences in France, Germany, Belgium, Switzerland, Denmark, Czech, Luxemburg, Japan Korea, Taiwan, Austria and Australia, with the Morin Khuur Ensemble, Khangal Quartet and Domog folk band.

Pearl Beach book fair was biggest ever

The raffle draw with President Roger Murray and Progress Association member Heather Brown.

The Pearl Beach Annual Book Fair was held over Easter.

In what was the biggest event in the Fair's 36-year history, raised over $11,000 for the community's memorial hall upkeep and maintenance.

Organised by the Pearl Beach Progress Association, the event is claimed to be the largest Pearl Beach fundraising activity each year.

"This year was no exception with thousands of books on sale," said association communications officer Ms Lynne Lillico.

"Children gathered at Kids Corner to find their favourite story, or even someone to read to them.

"The raffle had two Central Coast winners, Jennifer Cowan and Lucy Roberts, collecting a large hamper each."

Association president Mr Roger Murray said: "Many community members gave of their time to set-up and dismantle the event, cooking for the cake stall, and importantly unpacking, collating and sorting thousands of books, that are generously donated throughout the year."

Foul bottoms on display at Patonga

Patonga artist Alan Williams will have his work, Foul Bottoms, on display at the Patonga Bakehouse Gallery until May 25.

Mr Williams has been drawing cartoons and boats for over 65 years.

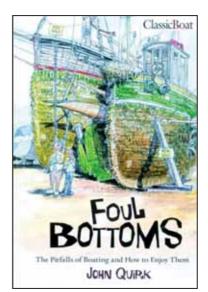

He was born in an air raid shelter in the UK during the blitz and later left to work as an architect in East Africa and New York before he arrived in Australia 30 years ago.

He has written and illustrated books on boating, military history and making kid's toys from junk, plus a series of humours articles for boating magazines.

These led to the publishing of Foul Bottoms, an autobiographical account of some of his nautical encounters and disasters.

He hides behind the pen name of John Quirk so that his architectural clients do not think they are entrusting their work to a sea going Mr Bean.

After years on the drawing board, Alan's style of humorous drawings have become more detailed with pen works and loose watercolour washes.

He is currently illustrating humorous books for a UK publisher and has a regular illustrated piece in Afloat magazine.

He is an extreme creekie" and shares a weekend house across the creek at Patonga with his wife Joanne.

Karise competes in reality show

Umina resident Karise Higgins, 19, will appear on Channel Nine television show The Voice on Sunday, April 15.

Karise completed an online audition for the reality TV show and was then selected for the blind auditions held in Fox Studios Sydney.

It is not yet known whether the blues singer will join Team Delta, Team Seal, Team Joel or Team Koith

On The Voice, four superstar musician coaches begin to select teams of 12 based solely on an artist's voice.

Seal, Joel Madden, Delta Goodrem and Keith Urban are competing as coaches, each one hoping to discover, and nurture Australia's next great voice.

During the blind auditions, if a coach is impressed, they push a button to select the artist for their team of competitors.

They select 12 acts in total.

At this point, the coach's chair will swivel so that they can face the artists they have selected.

If more than one coach selects the artist, the power shifts to the artist who may choose which coach they want to work with throughout the competition.

An artist is eliminated when they have not been chosen by one of the coaches.

Once the teams are set, the battle is on.

Coaches will dedicate themselves to developing their singers, giving them advice, and sharing the secrets of their success.

During the battle rounds, the coaches will pit two of their own team members against each other to sing the same song together in front of a studio audience.

After the vocal face-off, the coach must choose which of hisher singers will advance.

At the end of the battle episodes, only the strongest members of each coach's roster remain and proceed to the live stage shows.

In this final performance phase of the competition, the top artists from each team will compete against each other during a live broadcast.

The television audience will

In an interview on A Current Affair on Thursday, April 12, Karise said she had a mixture of emotions.

Benefit concert for Don Andrews

A benefit cocktail evening to commemorate the life of Central Coast guitarist Don Andrews will be held at the Peninsula Theatre on Saturday, May 12, from 5:30pm.

A Concert for Don will celebrate Don's life and music and feature a tribute concert with performances by noteworthy musicians including George Golla who often performed with Andrews, ex-students and tutors from the Central Coast Conservatorim's guitar department.

Loved and revered by many, the 82-year old was best known to local musicians and students as a performer, guitar tutor extraordinaire, head of the conservatorium's guitar department, and the organisation's former artistic director.

Don passed away with wife Monica by his side on March 5 after failing to recover from injuries sustained from a fall earlier in the year.

A kind, gentle man and a quiet achiever, Don was an inspiration to many and helped develop and mentor talented new guitarists across generations.

He continued to work as a tutor right up until his final days.

Some of the notable musicians Don worked with in Australia and overseas included Rex Stewart, William Clauson, Fred Hartley, Jay Wilbur, the Le Garde Twins, Burl Ives, Mel Torme and Larry Adler.

He also composed the background sound tracks to a number of films and wrote several published and well-known guitar tuition books.

View club holds fete for Smith Family

As part of Back to School Day, Endeavour View Club members will hold a fete on Wednesday, April 18, at the Uniting Church Hall, Ettalong, from 10:30am until 1pm.

A variety of home-made arts, crafts, baked goods and gardening items will be available for purchase, in addition to lucky dips and face-painting for children.

The event is being held to raise funds for the Smith Family charity.

"It's hard to believe that so many children are struggling right here in the lucky country of ours," said View national president Ms Lorraine Montgomery.

"Through our Back to School Day events, we're encouraging members of the public to recreate a day at school in a fun way, while raising some funds to help create a better future for kids in need.

"This is our chance to celebrate our past to change a child's future," she added.

More than 117,000 disadvantaged children were supported nationally through the Smith Family, but with one in 10 Australian children currently living in disadvantage, there were many more to reach, she said.

The charity was aiming to make sure that more children had access to the essential support required to help them make the most of their education.

Anyone can get involved in Back to School Day, staging their own activity on any day in April, with ideas including a retro trivia quiz, bake sale, sporting carnival or school dance, she said.

Famous gathering place at Hardys Bay

The most famous and regular gathering place on the Bouddi Peninsula is under the Yum Yum Tree in Hardys Bay in the late afternoon sun.

It originated around at the Wagstaffe store when it was run by Harry Kinson.

Harry sold liquor out of part of the shop and customers would often gather together around the front of the shop where the coffee tables are now.

The site and the gatherings were popularly known as Harry's Place.

When Harry moved from the Wagstaffe store and built the shop now known as Killcare Cellars around 1980, he took the liquor licence with him and his customers followed to the new gathering

In the early days the people who gathered there did their drinking in the car-park outside the shop.

Deb Holloman met her husband Steve Teasdell in the car-park of the bottle shop.

Later on, the drinkers moved across the road, to the small area

Many local identities have participated in the conviviality of the Yum Yum group.

Prominent among these in the 1980s and 90s were Brian Burrows and Jack Morrow, who would establish themselves regularly at 3pm every afternoon to open the proceedings.

Life saving club hosts overseas visitors

Saving Club hosted overseas visitors from Missoula, United States, on Thursday, March 22, as part of the Sydney Friendship Force Club's international travel program, which promotes cultural friendships worldwide.

Central Coast members Carol and John Farthing of Ocean Beach invited the international visitors for morning tea at their home.

"One of the highlights of the day was an insight into the surf lifesaving movement provided by Mark and Jane Davis from the Ocean Beach Surf Club," said

Ocean Beach Surf Life Friendship Force member Ms Carolyn Rogers.

> "The visitors were in awe of what the members of surf clubs provide on a voluntary basis to keep our beaches safe.'

> "Staples and Marie Byles lookouts provided a great overview of the area.

> "The pelican feeding was a hit as well.

"Our visitors came away with very good memories," Ms Rogers added.

Zach Everglades' Luke McBeatty in a quarter final (25-22) who had won the Fours and Pairs earlier in the week and then overpowered Ettalong's Cody McDonald 25-4 in a semi-final to go into the final

> In the other half of the draw, Chad Williams finished strongly to beat Jayden Moody 25-8 in a quarter final and steamed home over Caileb Peck 25-14 in the semi-final for a well deserved berth in the blue ribbon final.

Zach Robertson, who has been playing bowls since nine years of age and has represented Ettalong in the Grade 1 Pennant competition for the past two years was just too experienced for Chad Williams who only took up the game some 18 months

The Singles title was the culmination of three big days of bowls for the up and coming Under-18 bowlers with Caileb Peck, Jayden Moody, Chad Williams and Luke McBeatty taking out the Fours title and Jacob Caswell and Luke McBeatty beating Chad and Jayden Moody in an entertaining Pairs final.

All these winners will be invited to contest the NSW State under-18 championships to be played at Warilla in July.

Heavyweight champion Mark Davis will team up with Robbie Eagles and recent local boy Craig Cole to take on top contender Mick Moretti and tag team champions Ryan Eagles and Rick Sterling.

This star studded affair featuring the very best in Australian pro wrestling will occur under street fight rules, according to organiser Mr Doug Ryan.

"This means that at Woy Woy Leagues for this bout, the rule book will be thrown out and anything goes", he said.

Born and bred Wyong boy Dane Sinclair is one of the top up-andcoming prospects in the country.

"PWA really is the cream of the crop in Australian Pro Wrestling and I want to be on top.

"I have respect for Seeker but me bringing home the win in front of my home crowd, my friends, my family is very important to me and will mark a step closer to my ultimate goal."

"As the guys come from all around the country to show their wares, the ladies are just as important to PWA," said PWA organiser Mr Doug Ryan.

"Boasting some of the best female wrestlers in the world, Woy matches (women's division of PWA)."

Woy Woy Leagues will host Bracket A of the tournament to crown the new PWWA champion with world number one Madison Eagles having to forfeit the prize due to a serious knee injury she sustained while wrestling in America last October.

Competing in Bracket A is PWA stalwart and favourite to become the new champion Jessie McKay who is former champion Madison's protege.

The Woy Woy leagues club event is named "uncivil war" and is the 94th event hosted by the Pro Wrestling Alliance in NSW.

Mr Rvan said: "PWA events are always well received by those who attend as spectators, being an equal mix of athleticism and drama with a few laughs thrown in."

"These two heavyweights have proved themselves to be two of the very best on Australia and both of them are looking to compete in Japan later this year and it would be a coup for PWA to have its championship taken over there and defended.

"The event is not a one match card, however, and all of the guys and girls of the PWA have been working extremely hard in training to put on an incredible night and hopefully further stake their own claims to the championship."

Registrations open for skate park competition

Registrations are now open for Uminafied, a youth skate, BMX and scooter competition to be held at Umina Skate Park on Saturday, April 21, to help celebrate the 2012 National Youth Week.

Uminafied is hosted by Gosford Council's Youth Services team and is promoted as an action-packed day of activities for all youths aged between 12 and 24 years.

Categories for the skate and BMX competitions are 12-15 years and 16-24 years, and for the scooter competitions, 12-17 years.

Competitors can register on the day from 9am with competition starting from 10am and going until 3pm.

Gosford Council's Youth and Senior Services team leader Ms Fiona Morrison said that Youth Week was a great opportunity to celebrate the contribution young people make to the local community.

"As part of our commitment to Youth Week, Council in conjunction with the NSW Children's and Young Peoples Commission, have provided over $6000 in funding for activities across the week.

"This will go towards a small grants program, event promotion and a range of great events.

"We are hoping to make this year's event the best yet.

"The theme Imagine, Create and Inspire really has something for everyone from art exhibitions to skateboarding competitions and a Battle of the Bands music event," said Ms Morrison.

Surf club provides exchange student activities

A group of young people from Umina Surf Life Saving Club have assisted with the annual Rotary Exchange Program session at Umina recently.

This was the second year the club had conducted the activity for Umina Rotary.

The day kicked off at 2pm with over 20 foreign exchange students eager to hit the water.

A variety of activities awaited them after they received an introductory beach safety and skills talk presented by Umina Surf Life Saving Club president Mr Bill Cook.

Beach flags and water flags, board rescues, skills development and rescue tube scenarios were among the activities as well as the beach volleyball and educational IRB demonstrations.

A "water activity centre" - which includes an inflatable trampoline, slide and mat - was deployed some distance off shore for the students to enjoy.

"It was a successful day with friendships and networking complimenting the educational and enjoyable time by all teaching, learning and supporting one another to make a noteworthy experience," said the club's diversity officer Ms Gaby Krucler.

"It is expected many participants will keep in touch through social networking and will perhaps make contact in the future when travelling overseas."

Umina Surf Life Saving Club youth development officer Mr Carl Krucler said: "Such programs allow youth members of the surf club to have a broader experience than usual sporting and community service situations would normally provide."

"Participants are unanimous in the enthusiasm and willingness to continue to be involved in future years, which benefits their personal development, the overseas visitors, and the profile of surf lifesaving in the community."

Joe Marston is nominated as greatest footballer

Umina resident Joe Marston is amongst a few nominees to be selected by a panel of ex-players, commentators and administrators for the coveted title of 2012's Greatest Australian Footballer.

Nominees were primarily selected on the basis of their positive imprint on the profile and growth of football in Australia, in addition to their consistent demonstration of excellence on the national or international stage, but were also required to either be an Australian citizen or to have played for an Australian team.

The award is supported by the Football Federation of Australia and is used to assist the Johnny Warren Football Foundation by donating all funds raised through sponsorship, ticket sales, and event auctions.

Earlier this year, Mr Marston

Mr Marston is notable for being the first Australian to not only play for, but also reach the FA Cup finals with a British football club (Preston North End, 1954).

of Australia Post's Australian

Upon his return to Australia after five years in Britain, Mr Marston continued to prove himself as a pioneer by becoming the first man to both captain and coach the Australian team, playing for the squad on 37 occasions in total.

Other accolades received by Mr Marston included the Order of the British Empire, the Alex Tobin Medal, inductions into the Sport Australia Hall of Fame, the Football Federation Australia Hall of Fame and the NSW Hall of Champions.

Mr Marston's achievements are acknowledged by the A-League annually, when the Joe Marston Medal is awarded to the player of the match in that year's grand final.

The public can vote for their favourite player on the Greatest Australian Footballer website and the outcome will be decided with an equal weighting between the votes of the panellists and those of the public.

Local rivals in Easter Cup clash

2012 Central Coast Cup kicked off over the Easter long weekend with all 10 rugby league clubs "primed to hurtle down the players' race in hot pursuit of September glory," according to Central Coast Rugby representative League Andrew Stark.

"Arch-rivals Umina and Woy Woy clashed just in behind the sand dunes at Col Gooley Oval on Saturday, in what was a tremendous struggle," said Mr

"Both teams were looking to build on their respective top five placing of last winter and a first up win was keenly sought.

"Woy Woy added

South's NRL three quarter Matt Riddle, along with Manly Sea Eagles backrower Beau Bovis, to their roster.

However, these gains were offset somewhat by the loss of Chris Hyde who's huge contribution in 2011 enabled the hooker to share the competitions Player of the Year Award with Warriors half Pat Murphy.

"Umina have shown good form during the pre season trials, accounting for Kincumber four tries to two before overrunning an undermanned Toukley nine tries to nil," Mr Stark said.
