Wicks promises continuous mobile coverage on our trains

Federal member for Robertson, Ms Lucy Wicks, has promised Peninsula rail commuters free wifi at Woy Woy train station and continuous mobile coverage all the way to Sydney if she is re-elected and the Coalition Government is returned.

"We will invest to upgrade and build telecommunications infrastructure to improve the lives of one in four of the adult workforce who commute long distances by train each day," Ms Wicks said.

More than 30 kilometres of rail between Wyong and Hornsby are black spots where commuters currently face little or no mobile data coverage, according to Ms Wicks.

The Coalition would invest $12 million to provide continuous in-train mobile coverage along the rail corridor between Wyong and Sydney as well as wifi at each train station.

"This will improve the lives of thousands of Peninsula residents who leave home before dawn each day and return after dark," said Prime Minister Malcolm Turnbull.

"It will make work time more productive, enhance leisure time and help families and friends connect," Mr Turnbull said.

"And it's happening because local Member Lucy Wicks, after spending hundreds of hours talking to commuters, told me this was one of the most practical things we could do for families on the Central Coast," he said.

The Federal Minister for Communications, Mr Mitch Fifield, said the Coalition understood that reliable mobile coverage was crucial for productivity.

"The Coalition understands the importance of reliable mobile coverage so commuters can get work done and stay in touch with family or the office," Mr Fifield said.

Ms Wicks said the commitment was a game-changer which would directly benefit thousands of people every day.

"This is a major, innovative commitment from the Turnbull Government which will mean more of our hard-working commuters can stay connected for longer on the daily commute, which can be a four to five hour round trip to Sydney or Newcastle," Mrs Wicks said.

The $12 million commitment was expected to leverage an additional $4 million investment from the NSW Government, Ms Wicks said.

There would be an expression of interest process for mobile network providers to bid for the funding.

"A re-elected Turnbull Coalition will work with the NSW Government to provide in-kind assistance to deliver the wifi and improved mobile coverage, facilitating access to land along the rail corridor and helping facilitate planning approvals for new infrastructure," Ms Wicks said.

Election promises tabulated

Both Liberal and Labor Parties have been making promises to spend money on key projects for the Peninsula during the election campaign.

The election promise table

(above) lists pledges made by both major parties since the election was called.

The table allows readers a list to keep track of which promises have been kept by the winning party after the election.

Our election coverage, including candidate profiles, general information about the Robertson electorate, the location of polling booths as well as information from the parties begins on page 8.

Labor promises major infrastructure upgrades

The Peninsula could see major infrastructure upgrades if Labor was elected to government, according to Labor's Candidate for Robertson, Ms Anne Charlton.

Ms Charlton has announced a $60 million roads package.

She said the Peninsula would get the most benefit from the Roads Rescue Package, with more than 40 roads in Woy Woy, Umina, Ettalong and Booker Bay funded under a Labor Government compared with the Liberal's commitment of $2.75 million for just three roads: one in Umina and two in Booker Bay.

"This announcement is proof of Labor's commitment to not only improving infrastructure on the Peninsula but also creating jobs to drive the economy for the next generation," Ms Charlton said.

"In three years, all the Liberals have done is cut the ribbon on roads that Labor funded.

"Lucy Wicks has not listened to the concerns of locals about the state of their roads and only came up with $2.75 million for Peninsula roads," she added.

According to Ms Charlton, the commitment by Labor recognised the neglect of important issues that the people of the Peninsula have endured at the hands of successive Liberal representatives at local, state and federal levels.

"Labor will fix what has now become a patchwork of badly maintained roads," Ms Charlton said.

"This significant investment will keep motorists, cyclists and pedestrians safe.

"The flood-prone Peninsula is beset by a backlog of legacy roadworks further exacerbating safety problems and congestion in the area.

"These issues must be fixed and only Labor will take action on the Peninsula to grow jobs and the economy, to improve the efficient movement of small business, to meet tourist expectations, boost the local economy, and keep our pedestrians moving safely around our beautiful suburbs.

"Only Labor is listening to the people of Robertson to make investments that put people first," Ms Charlton concluded.

June is wettest month this year

The Peninsula's rainfall total for the month of June stands at 366.7mm, after a fall of 34mm on June 20.

The monthly total is more than twice the monthly average of 155mm and makes June the wettest month this year, according to figures supplied by Mr Jim Morrison of Woy Woy.

January was previously the wettest month this year with 343.4mm.

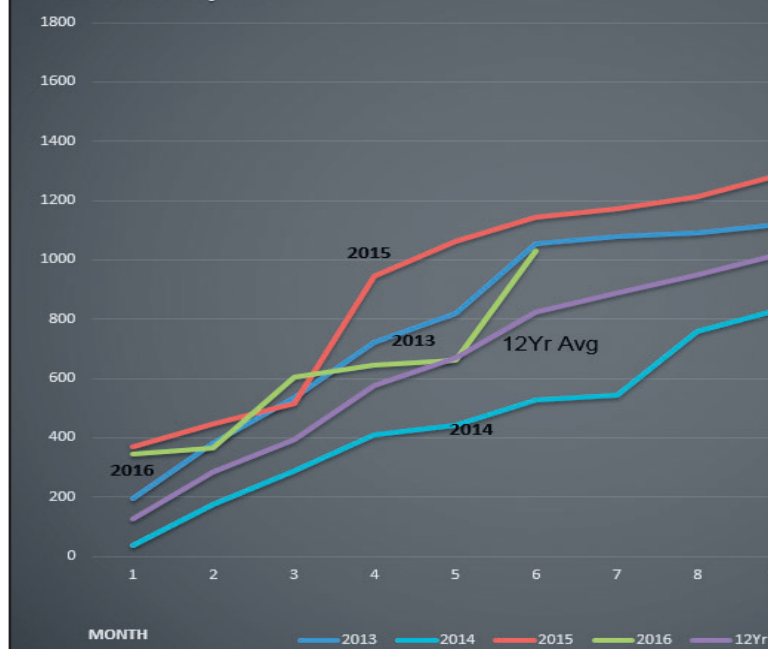

Only three months have recorded higher rainfall in the last 12 years: January 2015 (367.4mm), June 2007 (377.6mm) and April 2015 (431.9mm).

The next highest monthly rainfall figure was recorded in April 2007 and was 20 per cent less than this month's total at 292.9mm.

The cumulative total rainfall this year is 1029.2mm, which is 25.2 per cent above the average at the end of June of 822mm.

Facilitator appointed for land sale meetings

Mr Gary Warnes has been appointed as independent facilitator to conduct public meetings about the reclassification of community land owned by Central Coast Council at 83 to 85 Brisbane Ave, Umina.

The Council has stated that the form of the public meeting on July 6 will be determined by the facilitator.

Save Central Coast Reserves coordinator Ms Sue Chidgey said: "We asked for a night time session for the meetings to be held on July 6 so that people who work could attend but that hasn't happened."

She said she had also asked council, on several occasions, for clarification on whether members of the public would be required to register to attend the meetings and/or speak at the meetings.

"My understanding is that members of the public may be permitted to speak but all protocol at the meetings will be at the discretion of the facilitator," she said.

Central Coast Council's administrator Mr Ian Reynolds said that any council wanting to sell land classified as community land it must first get that land reclassified as operational land.

He said the current process had been initiated by the former

An aerial view of the reserve in Brisbane Ave Umina as shown on the Central Coast Council (former Gosford Council) website

Gosford Council but said he could assure the public that the person appointed to oversee the reclassification process was independent.

"People will be able to speak and there will be a report to council," Mr Reynolds said, although he said he could not "direct the consultant's findings."

Umina resident Ms Amie Raz said: "It would be great to have residents attending the public hearing on July 6 and supporting community green spaces."

Ms Raz said she intended to attend one of the meetings to argue for the reserve at 83 to 85 Brisbane Ave to remain as community land.

The Brisbane Ave reserve is the only community land on the Peninsula to be considered for reclassification with 10 others around the Central Coast.

Another 15 parcels of community land, including several more on the Peninsula, will be considered at a later date, yet to be announced by Central Coast Council.

"Other reserves on the Peninsula including Jumbuck Crescent and Pozieres Ave will have public hearings in the next few months," Ms Raz said.

The first round of public meetings will be held on July 6 in the Erina Room at the Erina Centre, adjacent to Erina Library at Erina Fair.

Sessions will run from 12pm to 2pm and from 4pm to 6pm.

Ms Raz said people wanting to keep the reserve as green space should write a submission to the council.

Submission about the proposed rezoning and reclassification of 83 Brisbane Ave (Lot 195 DP 9894 Umina) and 85 Brisbane Ave (Lot 196 DP9894 Umina) should be sent to council before July 14.

Submissions need to be signed, addressed and dated.

They can be sent to: Chief Executive Officer, Central Coast Council, PO Box 21, Gosford, NSW, 2250.

Work completed during stage one of the Rawson Rd Railway Crossing Replacement Project may be abandoned

NSW Budget ignores level crossing safety, says Smith

The absence of funding for the Rawson Rd level crossing in the NSW State Budget is a "road safety concern", according to Member for Gosford Ms Kathy Smith.

"There is no mention of the biggest safety concern on the Peninsula, the level crossing at Rawson Rd," Ms Smith said.

She said the Budget had only included "a contribution of funding for a pedestrian refuge at the intersection of Ocean Beach Rd and Lone Pine Ave, Umina, along with funding for road resurfacing, signage and delineation on Patonga Dr, Patonga".

"I welcome the funding to improve road safety but the biggest road safety concern for residents on the Peninsula is the unfinished and long-awaited Rawson Rd Level Crossing Replacement Project.

"It has received no additional funding in the latest Budget," she said.

"My office has been inundated with enquires regarding this project and residents have serious safety concerns," said Ms Smith.

Shadow Minister for the Central Coast, Mr David Harris, said the NSW opposition believed the future of the Rawson Rd level crossing replacement "must be seriously in doubt".

"I think the locals should be very upset," he said.

"This was a clear commitment in 2011.

"They built the first part, which was the pedestrian underpass that most people said they didn't want and the actual underpass, that most people said they did want, has not been built," he said.

"People have got a right to say they were misled in last two Budgets."

Cafe donates outdoor furniture to the public

A Umina cafe has donated its outdoor furniture for public use after being asked by the Central Coast Council to remove it under new council provisions.

Jasmine Greens Cafe owner, Ms Gabby Greyem said: "We're located in a park and not on a busy urban street, so I don't see how Council's Guidelines for Business Use of Public Footpath Policy applies in our situation.

"Our furniture attracts people to come to the park and stay longer," she said.

She said the council had similar outdoor furniture in the park.

"No one can tell the difference between council's furniture and our furniture, but council has told us that there are different rules for their deck chairs and our chairs."

The cafe, which operates from a council facility in the Peninsula Recreation Precinct, was a popular park-side destination, she said.

Since its opening in June 2014, Ms Greyem said the cafe had invested more than $3000 in outdoor furniture for its customers.

"The biggest complaint we receive is that we don't provide enough furniture," she said.

Ms Greyem said she had decided, in light of new council provisions, to donate the cafe's outdoor furniture to its customers.

Ms Greyem said donating the furniture for the public to use was in line with the Council's aim to make the most of our outdoor spaces.

"It's not uncommon for people to take several of our tables and host a birthday party on them under the trees, and we think that's great," she said.

Ms Greyem said the cafe made regular contributions to the community, and provided community service for Central Coast Council's Place Making Team.

Every day the cafe's staff set up and pack away deck chairs and a mobile library as well as store flags for the Get Active fitness program, she said.

Ms Greyem said the furniture was often seen as a public resource.

"We offer this service for free to the council and no one can tell the difference between council's furniture and our furniture."

Ms Greyem said that Jasmine Greens customers had embraced the adoption of the cafe's furniture knowing they had their own seat and table to sit at when they visited the park.

Rotary donates more than $35,700 in a year

The Rotary Club of Umina Beach has announced that it has made donations of over $35,700 during the past year.

Major beneficiaries include the Brisbane Water Secondary College and Peninsula Village.

Past president Mr Geoff Melville presented the donation of a $5645 bladder scanner to the Peninsula Village retirement centre during the year.

Brisbane Water Secondary College agricultural farm received $5500 from the club.

In addition the club provided a $1000 bursary to the high school and raised another $520 through the sale of fluffy toys.

"We also sold Christmas trees, the funds going to the Brisbane Water Secondary College who assisted with manning the sales location," said the club's community services director, Mr Glen Scorer.

Mr Scorer said the club had run a successful program of barbecues at a local hardware store.

"In addition we supported Mary Mac's Place by manning a food collection at a Umina supermarket in the lead up to Christmas," he said.

Outside of the local area, Umina Rotary raised over $11,000 for solar panels on Vakuta Island Papua New Guinea and ran its usual Bowelcare project.

Other payments were made to: Save the Farm, Central Coast Family Support Services; a science and engineering project; RYLA; RYPEN; MUNA; Youth Connections; the Rotary Foundation; and Rotary Foundation End Polio Now.

The dredge currently located at The Entrance could be used to clear the Brisbane Water Channel

No funding in Budget for channel dredging

No funding has been provided in the State Budget to dredge the channel between Brisbane Water and Broken Bay at Ettalong, according to Member for Gosford Ms Kathy Smith.

"Sediment in the channel continues to pose a danger to both leisure and commercial craft," said Ms Smith.

"This is a much-used area for leisure boating and we don't need a disaster to happen," Ms Smith said.

"The Minister has advised that there are no plans for dredging in the near future and this budget has definitely confirmed that," she said.

Ms Smith said she had been advised that NSW Roads and Maritime boating safety officers would continue to monitor the channel for any further changes or impacts to navigation.

"This is just another kick in the guts for local residents," Ms Smith said.

"First it was the closure of the local RMS office, then the debacle with the Rawson Rd Level Crossing Replacement Project and now the lack of dredging in the gateway to the Peninsula," she said.

Central Coast Council chief Mr Rob Noble said senior staff within the council had raised the idea of moving the council-owned dredge located at The Entrance south to dredge the Brisbane Water channel.

"It has been thought of by our senior staff but I don't have an outcome yet," Mr Noble said.

Shadow Minister for the Central Coast, Mr David Harris, said the new Central Coast Council may own a dredge but they would still need to find money to cover the cost of the work needed to clear the Brisbane Water channel.

"Council may be able to move the dredge but they still have to pay for it and they only have money in their budget for dredging Tuggerah Lakes," Mr Harris said.

"The State Government should be funding it," he said.

"The fundamental part about this is that local government is given amounts of money to run local parks and crown land on behalf of the State Government and that comes with a responsibility for the State Government to pay for major projects when they are needed.

"When Chris Holstein was the Member for Gosford he made a commitment to dredge Correa Bay but the Ettalong channel has to be a higher priority than Correa Bay," he said.

Liquor Accord meeting

Brisbane Water Licencing Police attended a meeting of the Central Coast Liquor Accord at Ettalong Diggers on Tuesday, June 21.

Brisbane Water Local Area commander Superintendent Danny Sullivan said members of the Accord were informed that there had been an influx of false ID cards in circulation in the local area.

"Anyone found with a false ID will be banned from all licenced venues covered by the Liquor Accord," Supt Sullivan said.

He said the Central Coast Liquor Accord's decision to introduce a "banned from one banned from all" policy for anti-social behaviour related to both alcohol and drug abuse had been paying off.

According to the latest statistics from the Bureau of Crime

Statistics, instances of crimes related to alcohol-fuelled anti-social behaviour had declined in the local area.

"We have 200 names on our banned list and it is powerful because it hits people in an area where they care; they want to go out and be able to socialise with their friends," he said.

"There is an obvious dividend in cooperation and safety but the best part about it for me is what we are doing on the Peninsula through cooperation and relationships.

"That makes it sustainable and also a really powerful case study about the Central Coast because of the strength of our relationships," Supt Sullivan said.

Tender accepted for tip plant hire

The Central Coast Council has accepted a tender from B and D Excavations Australia Pty Ltd for plant hire at Woy Woy tip for 12 months.

B and D Excavations Australia Pty Ltd is a Tumby Umbi business and was one of 15 plant hire companies who submitted tender applications.

Tenders were requested to enable current operations to continue at the tip.

"Council previously engaged a contractor to provide and operate two items of plant being a 20 tonne excavator and a 20 tonne dump truck to supplement council-owned plant," said a report from Central Coast Council's department of assets, infrastructure and business to council's June 22 ordinary meeting.

According to the report, the selected contractor will be requested to provide a 20 tonne excavator and 20 tonne dump truck "as operational requirements dictate".

"Works will include: construction of cell; carting of cover material; clay capping; and drainage and other construction works.

The tender was advertised on March 22 and closed on April 12.

Applicants were assessed on price, previous experience and performance, plant resources, work health and safety records and systems and environmental management records and systems.

"The tender panel considered reviewed offers from lower priced tenderers and determined that the lower price tenderers had little or no experience in landfill construction," the report said.

"The panel recognised it was necessary for the successful tenderer to have a sound knowledge of the landfill EPA licence requirements."

According to the report, the chosen tenderer had been used in capital projects at Woy Woy tip in recent years and had "a superior knowledge and experience of daily operations, construction techniques and landfill infrastructure".

"They provide the best value for money for council," it stated.

Concerns about lack of transparency in Council sell-off of public lands

A number of resident and neighbourhood groups have formed to oppose the Council's proposed sell-off of public lands in Gosford.

This process commenced in 2015 with the former Gosford Council supporting the reclassification of over 30 lots of public land to then be sold - many of these have environmental values or are parks or public spaces used by local communities.

Over 200 people attended a public meeting in February and over 1500 signatures have been submitted through petitions raising concerns about the process.

However, the new Central Coast Council is continuing poor process in engaging with local communities on the proposal. After many months, Council listed the lots on their website - however, didn't include all of the lots. (Hard to believe that Wamberal Memorial Hall is under threat!) It's also not easy to find - tucked away under community facilities.

Next in this battle is a public hearing on Wed, 6 July - with a number of sites listed for discussion and an independent consultant appointed. Community members have been unable to obtain the terms of reference for the independent consultant - and the advert for the public hearing provides no information about how to register to speak.

On 8 June, the Central Coast Council stated in its meeting highlights that "world class engagement will be at the heart of Council decision making". Administrator Ian Reynolds was quoted as saying "I want to make sure the Central Coast is the best it can be at everything and this includes engagement with our community."

This current process falls far short of that ideal.

GetUp surveys Peninsula voters

A GetUp survey conducted at Woy Woy shopping centres indicated that the majority of Peninsula voters want multinationals to be taxed more to pay for health, education and pension cuts.

Local GetUp group members Ms Shery Stewart, Ms Robyn Heazlewood and Ms Karin Solondz said they conducted interviews with 70 people on election issues at shopping centres on the Woy Woy Peninsula.

Seven questions were asked. Ms Solondz said that caution needed to be exercised in the interpretation of the survey as it was a small sample size and more research needed to be done.

However she said that results on the voting system and party policy may provide valuable insight into voter disengagement and disempowerment and an argument for a change to a more empowering voting system.

When asked whether multinationals should be taxed more to help fund free equal education, Medicare and to stop pension cuts, 85 per cent answered yes.

Only 7 per cent said no and 8 per cent said they did not know.

A similarly high response, 82 per cent, agreed with the statement that "parties should have seats in parliament in accordance with the real percentage of their actual vote".

The proposition that big company donations to political parties should be stopped was supported by 83 per cent of the people interviewed.

Likewise, 84 per cent agreed that "jobs and growth should be socially and environmentally responsible".

Seventy two per cent did not agree with "company fossil fuel subsidies" and 69 per cent said they would be prepared to have coal exports stopped if it helped save the Great Barrier Reef.

Only a minority (44 per cent) knew which parties represented them on most of these issues or that the Greens and Labor were the parties closer to representing the above majority views.

Ms Solondz said New Zealand recently changed to a fairer, more equitable voting system called a mixed member proportional representation system, which does not advantage the major parties.

In New Zealand, every person gets two votes: one for the party of their choice and the other for the member of their choice.

"Seats in parliament are roughly equal to the real percentage of each party's vote, no more and no less, and no one's vote goes to another party," she said.

"In New Zealand, as in most democracies around the world, political parties generally have to negotiate and compromise on policy with other parties to get into and stay in power."

She said that meant it was harder to go against the will of the majority of the people on popular issues such as Medicare, free education or to cut pensions.

Major parties cannot claim a mandate when they obtain only 30 to 40 per cent of the vote.

Election promises fall short, says taskforce

Federal election funding promises for the Woy Woy Peninsula leave a lot to be desired, according to the Central Coast Taskforce.

Labor has committed $3 million to Peninsula community projects, according to the Taskforce which is backed by John Singleton.

The only known project the Liberals have announced, over and above roads, is the $1.5 million for the PCYC at Umina.

"The Peninsula commitments are not adequate," said Taskforce chairman Mr Chris Holstein.

"The Peninsula is a major area of the Central Coast, a substantial residential area.

"It's a hub for the region," Mr Holstein said.

Labor has promised $2.5 million for the extension to the Ettalong Foreshore, $2 million for a satellite primary health care facility fit out on the Peninsula and $500,000 to scope the feasibility of building a new road from Woy Woy to the M1.

"Neither of the parties are up to scratch on what is required for the Peninsula," Mr Holstein said.

"The Central Coast Taskforce demands more information from Labor on the promised $60 million for Central Coast roads, and the breakdown for the Peninsula, and challenges the Liberals to commit more than the miserly $18.3 million for roads promised.

"The Liberals have promised $2.7 million in roads funding for the Peninsula while there is $3.8 million for one road in Copacabana and $12 million into Dobell.

"The Liberals' funding is extremely unbalanced with regard to the needs of the Peninsula.

"We are not saying Copacabana doesn't need it, it does need it.

"The money going to the Peninsula is not adequate by a long, long way."

"In addition we haven't heard what either party is committing for the Peninsula on domestic violence, for youth and for jobs," said Mr Holstein.

Mr Singleton announced on June 14, that rather than backing candidates to run for Central Coast electorates in the July 2 federal election, he had recruited former Gosford mayor and NSW MP Mr Chris Holstein to head the Central Coast Taskforce.

Mr Singleton described Mr Holstein as a "heavy hitter" who would have the job of "keeping the bastards honest".

"The Peninsula's 30,000-plus residents will have an informed and critical take on what the major parties are and are not promising to deliver for the region in the election," Mr Singleton said.

"The Taskforce and Chris will be the political parties' conscience," Mr Singleton said.

Mr Holstein said he would focus on what commitments the two major parties make to the Central Coast in the lead-up to the July 2 poll.

"People will always have their opinions but hopefully they will be informed opinions," Mr Holstein said.

Hillary Morris The Greens

Commitments to Robertson:

The most important commitment I have made is to continue to campaign to end inequality and unfairness in our community, whether that is unequal action on climate change, unfair attacks on renewable energy, unfair subsidies to the fossil fuel industry, unequal access to affordable housing, unfairness in terms of marriage equality, asylum seekers and refugees, justice or Indigenous rights, or the shocking inequality that family violence represents.

I commit to representing the entire electorate equally because that's what an MP should do.

Why vote for me?

I would like to think that when people vote for me they are voting because of what the Greens represent, something different to the major parties.

I am the local face of the strong, consistent, fair and honourable principles of the Greens party.

Voting is a valuable civil right and it should be motivated by values.

People will also be voting for a person who has campaigned in this community for years, who runs a business here and who has brought up her children on the Coast.

Goals:

We can make the Central Coast the state hub for sustainable and genuine innovation and employment using our clean environment, powered by community-owned renewable energy, we can make sure that everyone benefits.

But we cannot overlook the critical shortage of affordable housing.

Creative ways of building that housing stock is one obvious path to make life easier for those in need, and provide real local jobs.

Renewables, NBN and housing: doing that will lead to more jobs and better lives.

Van Davy Independent

Commitments to Robertson:

As an Independent I can work differently.

I will establish three new positions in my electorate office: advocates for anti-corruption, pensioners, workers.

Each will have a community-filled research and action group to help me prepare legislation for the parliament for an Independent Commission Against Corruption; criminalisation of Australia's freeway to tax avoidance; abolition of politicians' privileges; a national pensioners' manifesto.

I will expose, prosecute injustices and problems within Robertson.

Why vote for me?

Unlike the major parties I support: relentless campaigning for Robertson priorities, not party or factional dictates.

I am controlled by no party, factional or donor bosses.

Both parties are riddled with lobbyists, mortally split by factional hatreds, guilty of mangling public policy to suit vested interests.

I will fight for the criminalisation of tax haven use.

I will introduce a speculation tax: similar to bank and TAB transaction fees, on all stock exchange trades.

Goals:

A 10-year roads plan for Robertson, a multi-dimensional youth plan with fast internet; and proper support for our 2000 homeless and ADF veterans.

Mobile blackspot funding for Killcare

Killcare is one of three areas put forward by Member for Robertson, Ms Lucy Wicks, to receive improved mobile phone coverage as part of an additional $60 million commitment to extend the successful Blackspot Program.

"New mobile base stations will bring a much-needed boost to mobile coverage, providing benefits to emergency service operators, businesses and residents," Ms Wicks said.

"I'm pleased to announce that this commitment would help ensure vital access to emergency services for people in these areas which has previously never been possible.

"We have also selected these areas because they have been overlooked by mobile network operators due to commercial factors.

"A re-elected Turnbull government will invite mobile network operators to bid for this new funding to provide coverage in the identified locations.

"The Coalition is committed to improving mobile coverage along major transport routes, in small communities and in locations prone to experiencing natural disasters, as well as addressing unique mobile coverage problems such as areas with high seasonal demand," Ms Wicks continued.

According to Ms Wicks, this is the most significant one-time increase in mobile network coverage to regional and remote Australia delivered by a single public funding programme in the history of mobile communications in Australia.

Following the success of the Coalition's initial $100 million investment, another $60 million funding round is already under way, with successful locations to be announced by the end of 2016.

"The Coalition's $220 million plan to address mobile black spots will ensure regional and remote communities have access to wider and more reliable mobile phone coverage," Ms Wicks concluded.

1 Van Davy [Independent]

2 Anne Charlton [Labor] 3 Morris [Greens] 7 Wicks [Liberal]

I differ from Liberal and Labor in 3 huge ways:

(i) INDEPENDENT: as an independent I am free of Party and factional bosses. I accept ZERO money from anyone ... no companies, developers, spivs or urgers. So, I am free to attend to YOUR wishes NOT the dictates of a Party, factional or donor boss. This is a huge difference because it means I can relentlessly pursue policies, when WE want to, at any time ... not when a Party tells us. A new way of operating is therefore possible. I will appoint paid 3 advocates into my electorate office: an anti-corruption advocate, a pensioners' advocate, and a workers' advocate. These 3 paid advocates will work with Robertson volunteers to help me [a] identify priorities in Robertson to be pursued every day [b] prepare legislation for me to campaign and build alliances around ... and to present to the media, Australian People, and Parliament. I will be a CAMPAIGNING politician.

(ii) ANTI-CORRUPTION: neither the Liberals nor Labor Party support a national Independent Commission Against Corruption. That is because they are frightened! And, neither the Liberals or Labor TALK about corruption in this election. BUT! Corruption is a major reason why Australia is in debt, Budget deficits are the norm, the mega-rich and multi-national corporations can dodge paying their taxes ... which means too little money is available for Government to pay for schools, TAFE, universities, Youth Policy, hospitals, the homeless, veterans' needs, and so on. Jackie Kelly [Liberal ex-member for Lyndsay] says the NSW Liberal Party is "riddled with lobbyists" ... and we all know about the NSW Labor Party. BOTH of them are divided by factional hatreds ... BOTH of them mangle public policy to suit vested interests and, gallingly, BOTH are guilty of self-interested privileges politicians shower upon themselves. Corruption of the political parties DOMINATES Australian politics:

- lobbyist-controlled factional choice of candidates
- factional overthrow of Prime Ministers
- lobbyist-controlled shaping of public policy especially "privatisation" [eg the current destruction of TAFE]
- developer-controlled influence in local government
- A conga-line of politicians facing charges of corruption

CORRUPTION BLEEDS THE ECONOMY ... AND TWISTS PUBLIC POLICY away from the Common Good towards vested interests and Private Profit. This immorality can be exposed ... relentlessly ... by an INDEPENDENT who, like me, is NOT dirtied by Party-factional bosses and money-donors. My Anti-Corruption Advocate will work with a high-powered Research and Action Group to help me find, expose, collect evidence, and prosecute corrupt practices within our electorate.

(iii) ANTI-TAX EVASION – CRIMINALISATION OF TAX 'HAVENS': NEITHER Liberals or Labor acknowledge the THUNDERING FREEWAY OF TAX EVASION that is the path to so-called "tax havens" and which is really a CAREFULLY CRAFTED and LEGAL highway OF ROBBERY, no accidental "loophole", made legal by the Big End of Town for the Big End of Town. The Prime Minister stands at the entry to this freeway of theft, trumpeting its legality and waving through all other corporations and the mega-rich thus robbing the Australian People of the funds needed for their Social Wage:

- Medicare • Pensions • Schools • Hospitals • Universities • TAFE • Roads • Youth policies • the homeless • ADF veterans • child care • dental care • family assistance • protection from violence.

Oxfam has recently established, using the limited examples available, that in ONE year almost $7 billion was lost in tax this way. That is equivalent to almost $30 billion over the forward estimates...and $70 billion over the next 10 years. With full disclosure this amount would be much, much more.

This relentless heist of public funds is possible because tax 'havens' have two characteristics:

- [a] Secret they do NOT report their activities to Aust Tax Office [b] Tax free ... I will relentlessly seek to CRIMINALISE the use of tax havens.

(iv) SPECULATION LEVY: this is a transaction fee [tax] on unproductive speculation, overwhelmingly from the Big End of Town. Neither the Liberals nor Labor support the introduction of a transaction levy, similar to what we pay at the banks, or at the TAB when we place a bet. For starters I would set the tax at 0.1% of all trades in stocks, shares, bonds, derivatives, futures and currencies. If successful the levy would rise to 1% after 2 years of experience.

7 Lucy Wicks (Liberal)

I will be voting "7" for Lucy Wicks for many reasons. The Liberal Party has proven itself to be a serial liar on cuts to Medicare, pensions, schools, hospitals, ABC/SBS ... it has entirely wrecked fast internet support for businesses and Youth Policy ... it defends the tax avoiders who rob us of our Social Wage and create hole-in-the-bucket Budget deficits ... it promises to give ANOTHER $50 billion tax GIFT mostly to tax avoiding Big Business. Layer upon layer of shame....and it proposes a raft of anti-worker and anti-pensioner measures such as: 15% GST, lesser pensions & lesser indexation, attack Penalty Rates, depress wages.

2 Anne Charlton (Labor)

I will vote "2" for Labor because Labor is 2nd best for pensioners & workers & small businesses. Many of my policies are similar to Labor's because I have spent my life in the Labour Movement proposing and/or supporting many of the policies that have been adopted by Labor and not the Liberals [eg Medicare, pensions, decent wages for workers, decent schooling & TAFE and University for Young People, equal pay and equal status everywhere for women, justice for Aborigines, Kyoto and renewables, and so on.]

So, it is not surprising that Labor policies, in many ways, are similar to my own. My differences with Labor are (i) to (iv) above ...

PLUS I am often worried Labor will bend. For example, I will be absolutely unbending on matters such as:

- * no nuclear ... South Australian Labor are a real worry here. Shame.
- * no new coal mines or expansion of existing mines Queensland Labor is compromised.
- * penalty rates ... several flaming unions are wobbly on this matter. Shame.
- * GST ... both leaders of Labor in Sth Australia and NSW have said under certain circumstances they would support a GST hike. Shame! GST should be wound back....it is an anti-pensioner, anti-worker & anti-small business tax which is needed ONLY TO COVER THE VAST TAX EVASION from Big Business, the mega-rich, and multi-national corporations!!!

3 Morris (Greens)

I will vote "3" for Hillary because she is such an overwhelmingly principled and decent person and because the Greens have, in many ways, led the political parties when it comes to advancing environmental thinking and gutsy strategies to draw attention to the destruction of our environment by an economic system which relies on Growth and expanded consumption. My beef with the Greens is their silliness at crucial times ... recently they joined with the Liberals to [a] knock 97,000 pensioners off their pension and to reduce the pension to another 200,000 while the mega-rich, Big Business and multinationals thunder down the Freeway of Tax Evasion [b] keep secret the financial and tax affairs of companies between $100 and $200 million [c] to sink Labor's original emission trading scheme and trigger the mess that followed.

Labor candidate revives Liberal plan

Labor's Candidate for Robertson, Ms Anne Charlton, has revived a Liberal Party plan from the 2010 election to build a road linking Woy Woy to the M1 at Mt White.

She is also backing a plan to straighten the railway line to Sydney, which was promoted by Gosford Liberal councillor Bob Ward earlier this year.

If elected to Government, Labor would fund a scoping study for the road link to the M1, she said.

Ms Charlton said the $500,000 scoping study would investigate the construction of a road from Bulls Hill to the Mt White interchange.

"At this very early stage, the study will examine the feasibility of such a project, factoring in community consultation and environmental issues," Ms Charlton said.

"There is little doubt that from an economic perspective, such a road would deliver jobs in the construction phase and open up access to the Peninsula for business and tourism.

"It would mean an eight kilometre journey from the M1 to Woy Woy instead of 26 kilometres via Kariong," she continued.

The $500,000 scoping study was announced by Labor Leader Bill Shorten on Saturday, June 18, as part of Labor's Positive Policies for the Central Coast.

This included a $60 million Roads Rescue Package and $2.5 million for footpaths to improve pedestrian safety and access.

Another $500,000 has been allocated to a scoping study into the straightening of the railway line between the Central Coast and Sydney, to speed travel times.

"Only a Labor Government has a real infrastructure and jobs plan for the people of the Central Coast and the Peninsula, which has been neglected for too long," Ms Charlton said.

Commitments to Robertson:

As part of Malcolm Turnbull's Liberal team, my commitment is for more jobs and growth.

This includes the new Central Coast Medical School, which will generate 750 jobs, a $200m boost to our local economy and never-before-seen career pathways for our young people.

It'll also help train and retain more local GPs.

I've been working with the University of Newcastle, the NSW Government and Council on this for over two years, and have backed it up with a $32.5m commitment.

Why vote for me?

It's an honour to serve the people of Robertson, and more than ever it's clear only the Turnbull Liberal Team has a Plan to ensure our region thrives.

Our innovation and science program will encourage more great ideas to market.

Small businesses and hard working families will benefit from the export trade deals, tax cuts and incentives.

Our plan also includes a sustainable budget with crackdowns on tax avoidance and loopholes, plus guaranteed funding for health, education and roads.

Goals:

To continue to deliver on our commitments, including 600 new jobs for Gosford and the Central Coast Medical School that will transform our region into one of countless opportunities for families and businesses.

See more of our local roads fixed, including our commitment to address some dreadful roads on the Peninsula and Copacabana.

To spend plenty more Saturdays with my husband and two children at Woy Woy Oval, now we've delivered our $3.5 million upgrade.

Administrator welcomes road funding promise

Central Coast Council has welcomed the announcement that a Federal Coalition Government would commit over $2.7 million toward road upgrades on the Peninsula, following an election victory.

The $2.7 million investment would be shared among traditional trouble-spots including: $1.1 million for Murray St in Booker Bay, $900,000 for Davis St in Booker Bay, and $750,000 for Ryans Rd in Umina Beach.

Central Coast Council administrator Mr Ian Reynolds said that making roads on the Peninsula safer and more accessible would be a real win for the local community.

"Residents on The Peninsula will be particularly pleased with local road improvements," he said.

Preserve the simple joys – eating our own prawns

For as long as I can remember, one of the simple joys of living on the Central Coast is the ability to have a nice feed of Hawkesbury River prawns, washed down with a couple of cold beers and perhaps followed by a nice feed of flathead.

Now it appears that this is under threat.

Apparently the small, one-man trawlers operating out of Patonga and Brooklyn aren't professional enough.

They aren't catching enough fish and they aren't aiming high enough.

The present NSW Government, under the guise of creating a stronger and more sustainable industry, wants to consolidate this industry, perhaps into the hands of a wealthy few and to aim to sell to the export markets of the world.

Globalisation, free trade agreements, profit before everything else, and conservative ideology at its most basic.

Well, a lot of people don't want to build business empires.

They want to go to work and, in this case, supply fresh, local, sustainably caught seafood to the people of the Central Coast.

I personally want to know the prawns I'm peeling have come from a local trawler, not an environmentally disastrous prawn farm in China.

There have been suggestions that the Hawkesbury River Fishery is unsustainable, so how about the government bureaucracy get out of the way and let these fisherman do what they have been doing for 50 years, keeping me fed.

Jobs and growth will not help the Peninsula

Jobs and growth appears to be the mantra today.

I wish that someone would explain just how we can have constant growth on a finite planet.

I also believe that the "jobs, jobs, jobs" idea is not feasible, since many jobs are going offshore or to technology and the human population is growing exponentially.

The effects of constant growth are visible on the Peninsula.

It's become difficult to find parking, the roads are clogged and tempers are frayed.

It's made worse now there is the battle going on concerning the underpass.

Seats on trains are often difficult to find.

There are many more, hard surfaces, so flooding is frequent and taller buildings not only block the light and views but sometimes cause wind tunnels.

There will soon be less green space and denser housing, even though it is well known that overcrowding leads to more delinquency.

Many young people cannot afford TAFE courses and anyway TAFE is being phased out and private vocational colleges are taking over.

Many of these are simply manipulating the system to their own advantage and the students are not getting what they paid for.

This will mean that more tradespeople will have to be found, probably on 457 visas.

They are cheaper.

Where is the research or evidence that private companies are more efficient than government?

Surely privatisation is simply an ideological view.

Shareholders must also receive their dividends.

The workers in both private and public companies are the same homo-sapiens so there will obviously be good and bad in both systems.

We constantly hear that trade unions are corrupt but we seem to be surrounded by corruption.

Even this week there has been the case of two privately-educated young men who have been found guilty of insider trading.

Two hundred and fifty years ago pregnant women and children of seven were working down the mines in Britain, pushing heavy carts or opening doors in the tunnels.

We would probably still be in that position if it were not for unions.

Again there's good and bad everywhere.

Donations to governments are very effective as shown on ABC's Four Corners program recently.

Is it this which has led to leachate draining from the Mangrove Mountain tip into our drinking water?

And to large residential developments about to be built on wet-lands on the Central Coast such as at Mardi and Chittaway.

We must realise that the amalgamation of councils was at the behest of developers: They will have fewer bureaucracies to deal with to get their developments through.

With the new bio-diversity plans being discussed more and more of our unique Australian flora and fauna will be lost, some forever.

So surely the mantra for all governments is really, money, yes and more money.

Demolish or make jetty good

The ex-Sheathers jetty at Koolewong has now been in a damaged state for well over a year.

Since RMS leases require a jetty structure to be kept in good order and condition, it is puzzling that the RMS has not taken some action on this matter, given that the agency has pursued other leaseholders for much less obvious faults.

The access to this jetty is completely insecure, and there is nothing to stop children venturing onto the timber remnants where an accident could easily occur.

It is time that this dangerously derelict structure was made good or demolished, so why has the Central Coast Council not taken up this issue and had the situation remedied?

Budget affects older people who need special care

Our organisation, Peninsula Village, as a member of Aged and Community Services Australia, the national peak body representing not-for-profit aged care providers caring for over one million frail older Australians, is standing together with our entire network to ensure frail older Australians get the care they deserve.

Our election campaign "Old, frail and invisible" highlights the significant issues impacting on them, the aged care workforce and industry sustainability.

Our residents and clients deserve better and together we can ensure that despite being old and frail, they are not invisible.

There is significant and growing concern about the impact of the 2016-17 federal budget cuts arising from changes around the Aged Care Funding Instrument (ACFI).

These will directly impact on older people who need specialised and complex care and support in our residential aged care facilities.

There are considerable reforms being undertaken in home care, which have significant financial impacts on aged care providers during implementation.

It is vital that Transition Funding is provided as was provided for the implementation of the National Disability Insurance Scheme.

It is imperative that we have

a strong and well trained and educated workforce for the current and growing ageing population.

The aged care workforce has not received sufficient attention from government to ensure policy settings will provide an appropriately skilled workforce to meet the future care needs of older Australians.

For the campaign, aged care providers will be demanding a response from politicians on three key issues.

The first is to halt the impact of the 2016-17 budget cuts on vulnerable older people in residential aged care.

There should be no cuts that impact on the care of older people.

A genuine consultative review of ACFI must be undertaken including provision of evidence to support changes.

We also want government to provide a transition fund for home care to assist providers to deal with looming significant reform, improve system implementation and ensure services are available and accessible to older people.

A National Aged Services Workforce Strategy needs to be finalised and funds delivered for the development of local programs to guarantee a workforce for the future.

He said she had every intention to returning to full representative duties when she had recovered.

He said it was well known in the community that Ms Smith was a cancer survivor.

"I know Kathy's intention is to fully return to work.

"There has been no mention of her doing otherwise and certainly no mention of the need for a by-election," Mr Harris said.

"Kathy has had treatment and she is recovering from it and she needs time to do that," he said.

Oyster farmers have different stories

Two local oyster farmers, Mr Dale Witchard and Mr Dean Whitten, have very different stories to tell about the current state of their businesses and their industry.

Mr Witchard, who is based in Patonga Creek, is successfully growing Sydney Rock and Pacific Oysters direct-to-harvest and is confident of his future as an independent operator.

Mr Whitten said he had not been able to operate due to sewer overflows into Brisbane Water in the June 4 and 5 storms and said he was holding on to the hope that the introduction of Pacific Oysters in Brisbane Water would revive the industry locally.

Mr Whitten, who operates out of Koolewong, said the Brisbane Water oyster farmers have not been able to operate since the storms of June 4 and 5.

He said periods of heavy rainfall, such as that experienced on the Coast during the first weekend of June, resulted in sewage pumping stations around Brisbane Water, particularly at Kincumber and Bensville, overflowing directly into the estuary.

"That means we can't sell anything for 21 days and the testing takes another week so it ends up being 30 days," Mr Whitten said.

"At the moment we are not operating because of the sewer spill so everyone who works for me is pretty much looking for other jobs," he said.

The immediate outlook for Brisbane Water oyster farmers is not good because the financial position of the local growers' association is weak.

According to Mr Whitten, the farmers can't afford to pay for the water testing needed to reopen the waterway.

He said the Brisbane Water Oyster Farmers Association would discuss whether or not there was money available to complete the required

Brisbane Water oyster farmers are looking for locations for on-land processing plants

testing when it held its annual general meeting in mid-July.

Mr Whitten said he held on to the hope that the introduction of Pacific Oysters in Brisbane Water would revitalise the industry.

"I think it would revive a hell of a lot if farmers started growing Pacific Oysters," he said.

"At the moment there are about 15 farmers who have aqua culture permits but are not harvesting," he said.

"Pacific oysters would be good for those existing farmers and for new farmers," he said.

"Then we could have a financial quality assurance program to do the water testing," he said.

"If Brisbane Water got up and running again [for oyster growing] it would clean up all the old, ugly derelict leases that haven't been used for 20 years so it would be a win-win for everyone."

Mr Whitten said he planned to grow both Sydney Rock and Pacific Oysters but needed a land-based depot to have the space and infrastructure needed to operate on a profitable scale.

Each Brisbane Water farmer would need about 750 square metres of land for processing, purification, harvesting and maintaining infrastructure.

He said the small size of the industry in Brisbane Water, along with the condition of the waterway, meant that Safe Food (the NSW Food Authority) required oysters grown in Brisbane Water to be purified before being sent to market.

"When purification first came in the policy was that every river did it.

"It was just part of the working week when you were shipping oysters," he said.

The damage caused to the industry on some major rivers, first by QX which killed Sydney Rock oysters and then by the Pacific Oyster Mortality Syndrome (POMS), meant the larger oyster farmers' associations had called for, and been allowed to take crops, direct-to-harvest instead of being required to put their oysters through purification.

This had not happened on Brisbane Water.

"I think it is just that the industry in Brisbane Water is pretty small with retired or part time farmers so we don't have a big posse of farmers marching in the same direction," he said.

The timber jetty between Whitten's oyster shed and the Koolewong shoreline was damaged in the East Coast Low that hit the area in April 2015.

"Everyone keeps asking me when we are going to fix the jetty," he said.

Mr Whitten applied for a low-interest loan from the NSW Rural Assistance Authority following the 2015 storms.

"After a year of shuffling papers someone from the department phoned me and said 'sorry Mr Whitten you are not eligible for it.

"We had hung in there hoping we would get that loan and after all the hoo-ha and hype when the storms happened it eventually all fades into nothing.

"I am in survival mode now and the last thing I can do is fix the wharf."

He said a local wharf builder had been collecting recycled timber to assist with its repair.

Oyster farming in Patonga Creek was a much easier proposition according to Mr Dale Witchard.

"We are positive to POMs but our oysters haven't died and we are still open for business.

"We are direct to harvest because our water testing have proven our estuary is not effected by storm events and contamination," he said.

Mr Witchard said the direct-to-harvest status of the Patonga Creek oyster farmers is reviewed annually by Safe Food.

When POMs was first diagnosed in the Hawkesbury River, Mr Witchard decided he needed to diversify his income streams so he acquired a retail seafood outlet in Ocean Beach Rd, Woy Woy.

As a fellow oyster farmer and seafood retailer, Mr Witchard said he agreed with the introduction of Pacific Oysters to Brisbane Water "200 per cent".

"If it is going to get the industry back up and running I think it is a good thing and I support their need for land-based processing plants," he said.

School maintenance backlog not funded

Three Peninsula public schools that were on a list of the 10 Central Coast schools with the largest maintenance backlogs have not received funding in the NSW Government's 2016 budget, according to Member for Gosford Ms Kathy Smith. Their combined maintenance backlog is estimated at almost $3 million. Woy Woy South Public School, Brisbane Water Secondary College's Umina campus and Woy Woy Public School were ranked eighth, ninth and 10th in the list which was compiled by the NSW Opposition. Based on NSW Government information, as of June 30, 2015, the maintenance backlog at Woy Woy South Public School was worth $961,692. Take off your blinkers and look at your environment

The lower back pain that brought you into the chiropractor may be as simple as lack of hydration or as complex as an impingement on a spinal nerve. Umina Chiropractic Centre has a group of chiropractors undertaking ongoing education to ensure that they can offer you an assessment that is in line with current best practice. When you come in for an appointment, prior to any adjustments, your chiropractor is assessing your central nervous system by neurological examination and your joint structures by orthopaedic assessments. A note of your current lifestyle is also taken as an important aspect of uncovering non sinister causes of your ill health. That lower back pain or headache may not always have an obvious medical cause. It is often your body's reaction to the environment that can create these symptoms. These environmental stressors express themselves by increasing your blood pressure and tightening your paraspinal muscle groups, causing tummy upsets and headaches etc. As an example, a gentleman had spent many tax payers' dollars on sophisticated medical diagnostic tests for severe headaches, cardiac palpitations, diarrhoea and sleeplessness. Our assessment revealed that his coffee intake was quite significant at 12 mugs per day. Suffice to say that chiropractic adjustments were needed, however without replacing the coffee with water, I would dare to say he would still be suffering poor healing. Please eat well, drink plenty of water, and walk 3-4 days a week for approximately half an hour each day. We look forward to assisting you with your health care needs. All the best from the team at Umina Chiropractic Centre.

A number of Pretty Beach Public School's senior students were involved in the Five Lands Walk Photography Workshop last term.

Their work will be displayed at the Gosford Art Gallery.

Mr Mark Moran facilitated the photography workshops for eight primary schools within the Five Lands.

The workshop consisted of a group of 30 students from each school.

The students were given a camera to work with for the day.

From the shots taken, a photo from each student was selected by the school to be displayed at Macmasters Beach Surf Club.

Each class from Pretty Beach Public School has been busy painting recycled cardboard cut-outs to contribute to the display to be held on Saturday, June 25, as part of the Five Lands Walk.

Pearl Beach Music Scholarship students Winner Tiana Young second from right

Conservatorium students awarded scholarships

Students of the Central Coast Conservatorium were awarded more than $2000 in scholarships after performing at the Pearl Beach Memorial Hall on May 28-29.

Students performed as part of the Junior Showcase Concert on May 28 and for the 11th annual Pearl Beach Music Scholarship on May 29 valued at $1000.

Nine students competed for the scholarship and presented a varied program made up of instrumental and vocal performance.

Students were accompanied by Central Coast Conservatorium and Sydney Conservatorium of Music pianist Ms Lilli Naulu.

The Irvine Piano Scholarship of $800 was awarded to piano student Kimberly Gilbert who played Elegie Opus 3 No.1 by Sergei Rachmaninov and Allegro Barbaro by Bella Bartok.

The People's Choice Award, valued at $250, was unanimously awarded to 17 year old vocalist Tiana Young, who wowed audiences with her renditions of Batti Batti o bel Masetto by Don Giovanni and Girl from 14 G by Jeanine Tesori.

The event adjudicator Mr Brian Buggy commended students on their performances and said relating to the audience and performing with emotion was fundamental.

Tiana Young was the recipient of the 2016 Pearl Beach Music Scholarship.

Central Coast Conservatorium CEO Mr Andrew Brennan said competition was a common aspect of music education.

He said both the Junior Showcase and the Scholarship gave students an opportunity to perform in front of an audience and play from their hearts.

"Students expressed themselves which is what music is all about," Mr Brennan said.

Music school starts crowd-funding campaign

A local music school has started a crowd-funding campaign to assist with the school's relocation.

The school building in Woy Woy was recently sold to new owners who plan to demolish it.

Mr Chris and Ms Madeline Stratford have owned and operated the Woy Woy School of Music in its rented premises for five years and have started a crowd-funding campaign to ask for community assistance with the costs of relocating.

After months of scouting they have found a new home for their music school on the main road of Woy Woy.

"Over the years, a strong community presence has developed within our student and tutor base," Mr Stratford said.

"Our vision for the next school is to build on that by creating a new home for music on the Central Coast," he said.

The school's new premises is more than twice the size of their original location which paves the way for its continued growth.

Since 2011 student numbers have grown from 38 to 180.

The school will also host a fundraiser concert, featuring acts from their bands and tutors as well as an open day during the school holidays for their grand opening at the new location, 81 Blackwall Rd, Woy Woy.

The new school will be re-branded as Stratford Music.

Crafts centre suffers from vandalism

The Ettalong Beach Arts and Crafts Centre Inc. was recently vandalised and 60 pillows made as part of its community project, boobs and bags, were destroyed. The boobs and bags project makes special cushions and donates them to Hospitals that give them to breast cancer patients.

The Arts Centre provides art, quilting and pottery courses for Peninsula residents of all ages across various mediums. The Centre is preparing for its annual Five Ways Exhibition held in June at the Gosford Regional Gallery. Media release, 20 May 2016 Sue Sullivan, Ettalong Beach Arts and Crafts Centre Inc.

Combining musical career and motherhood

Mothering a pre-schooler while starring in two tribute shows is not challenging enough for Killcare country music singer songwriter Melinda Schneider.

"I am focusing on a new album at the moment, writing songs for a new original album which will come out later in the year," Ms Schneider said. That doesn't mean she has stopped touring her much-loved Melinda Does Dorris show or her Great Women of Country tribute. It means that in addition to touring, performing and looking after her three-year-old son, Ms Schneider is about to head off to Nashville for some intensive song writing time.

The Great Women of Country tribute is a solo version of an album and show she worked on with Beccy Cole. "I am still waving the flag with great women of country," she said. "I did Campbelltown Catholic Club last Saturday night and it was very interesting. "A lot of people who came to see me after the show had seen me as Doris Day at the Opera House. "They are people who love country music, who love all the women and the songs but they are people who have been really Melinda Schneider is off to Nashville to write material for a new album dedicated to me as well and want to see me which is great. "All the songs are so incredible. "They are written to such high standards. "They are some of the best songs ever written," she said. Ms Schneider said she was particularly fond of performing material written by Dolly Parton. "There are four Dolly songs which are some of her best and she is just such a prolific songwriter and, of course, the audience sings along and I encourage that," she said. Melinda's trip to Nashville next month will be a little different. Before motherhood, she had made the journey at least once a year but this time she will be taking her family along. "It is very difficult to focus when you have a three-and-a-half-year-old toddler running around." While it's a challenge, she is also expecting motherhood to be a theme in the songs she writes for the new album. "I have already written a few songs about becoming a mum and this album is going to be about women and women's issues in general. "I have finally joined the club and became a mum and learned about the challenges like balancing your career and motherhood." Women of Country is something Melinda plans to keep doing, even when the album is complete and released. "There are a lot of areas I haven't taken that show to regionally, so probably will when the new album comes out and I can do some of the Great Women songs and some from the new album," she said. Residents meet council about hotel plans

Representatives of the Patonga Community have met with the Council assessment officer for the Patonga Pub development application to discuss the development proposal to increase the commercial footprint of the existing hotel.

According to Patonga Community Working Group chair Mr Ross Trembath, the purpose of the meeting on Friday, June 10, was to express and reinforce the community's concerns.

"These concerns are identified in the more than 70 submissions written by members of the community," Mr Trembath said.

The emphasis of the community submissions was that the development should, as near as possible, remain relevant to the small-scale commercial and low-density residential zoning of Patonga, as described in the planning provisions, he said.

"The key point is that the DA changes the hotel from a single-storey commercial premises with a partial low-key residential top floor, to a double storey commercial premises," he said.

"This is an over reach and overdevelopment.

"The proposed level of development of the site is such that any expansion of the current commercial use cannot be achieved without major variations of the planning provisions in place for this location in Patonga.

"The core objectives of these provisions are that development should be low-scale, compatible with its location, appropriate to meet the needs of the residents of Patonga and provide on-site visitor parking.

"The proposed expansion of the hotel and fish shop will essentially double the capacity of the current premises.

"The three first-floor residences would be demolished, to be replaced with a new expanded upper storey which would contain a cocktail bar, sports bar and a 150-seat function centre.

"The community believes that if the development is approved in its current form, it will not be a small scale local retail business.

"The proposed level of use will dominate the location and increase impacts on this precinct of Patonga from commercial development.

"The patrons of the current commercial uses already dominate the use of public land and the visual amenity of the scenic foreshore area.

"The community in its submissions has recognised the need to offer a balanced approach to this proposal and has identified support of the improvements of the facility at the ground floor level," he said.

According to Mr Trembath, a majority of residents, including many of those who lodged objections to the DA, were regulars at the Patonga Beach Hotel and were very supportive of having the business in the town.

"However, they believe there is plenty of scope to improve the facilities without creating a destination venue that will all but destroy the seaside village charm it seeks to capitalise upon," he said.

The Shame File

Central Coast Newspapers has a very liberal credit policy for advertisers and realises that from time to time, people, businesses and organisations get into financial difficulty and may need assistance and time to get things back on track.
However, some people, businesses and organisations take advantage of this generosity they use advertising but simply don't pay their account after several months and need to be taken to court to do so.

From time to time, as necessary, we will name these people, businesses or organisations as a warning to our readers so that they will be wary when dealing with them.

The Lions in action

Lions move into third spot

After just one game of the second round, Woy Woy Lions moved into third spot on the Rugby Union competition ladder.

With five teams grouped around the top of the table, it will take a series of wins to ensure they make the final four.

The unbeaten Terrigal is clear leader on 42 points but just two points separate the 2016 premiers Ourimbah on 30, Woy Woy and Kariong on 29 and Avoca on 28.

Gosford is on 21.

Following a disappointing loss to Ourimbah at home in the final match of round one, the Lions bounced back to defeat Avoca by 42 points to 28 at Heazlett Park, showing glimpses of the sparkling attacking play that had been a feature of their highly successful past two seasons.

In an exciting match, the Lions scored five tries including a double to brilliant young winger Iliese Rokodregala.

Each time Avoca challenged for the lead the Lions were able to score converted tries to keep clear of their dangerous opponents.

Back-rowers Feleti Atiola, Chris Paseka and Lapana Vitale once again showed they are the equal of any combination in the competition.

Atiola and Paseka are right back to their best after slow starts due to injury and Vitale is having a wonderful initial season in grade.

Dynamic half-back Sione Toki and inside centre Wade Hannell also had very strong games while the Lions welcomed back young fullback Alex Moore, who not only played extremely well but kicked six goals to cement his spot as kicker.

How the country selectors left Hannell out of their Colts side is a mystery to Woy Woy supporters who see his whole-hearted performances week in and week out.

The minor grades have also continued in good form with the club now running third in club championships.

Four-foot swells for Boardriders

Umina Boardriders held their June Competition at Umina Beach amidst four-foot swells on June 13.

The competition had seen several delays due to the string on bad weather and heavy storms seen this June.

It was split into four categories: Opens, Cadets, Masters and Social Surfers.

Huw Toner placed first in the Opens, with Shannon Adams taking second, Craig Glynn third and Matt Munson in fourth.

The Cadets was taken out by Jedd Golledge, with Leon Dransfield in second, Oscar O'Connell in third, Jez Kimber in fourth and Talon Green in fifth.

Tony Wilson secured first in the Masters and Darren James took out second.

Ian Black and Dave Jack took out third and fourth respectively.

First place in the Social Surfers heat went to Dave Petony, with Shane Muldowney claiming second and Layne Martin third.

Woy Woy was too good

Woy Woy buckled down for Round 10 of The Central Coast Rugby Union Competition, dominating Avoca Beach in their match on June 18.

Woy Woy was too good for Avoca Beach at Heazlett Park and won by 42 points to 27.

Woy Woy got away to a great start and scored its opening points in the opening seconds of the match.

They were never headed from that point.

Avoca Beach played good rugby and did score four tries, but every time they scored points and got close to Woy Woy, the visiting team was able to slip away with its own points and maintain the lead on the scoreboard.

Woy Woy led by 22 points to 13 at the half way point and was able to maintain that lead for the remainder of the clash.

The win sees Woy Woy back into the top four.

Best players for Woy Woy were flanker Aliseleti Atiola, who was everywhere all day, while centre Wade Hannell had one of his best games of the season.

Avoca Beach were always very close but a late try to Woy Woy cemented their victory.

Woy Woy now sits in third place.

Surf club holds trivia night for world title trip

The Ocean Beach Surf Lifesaving Club will hold a fundraising trivia night from 7pm on Saturday, July 23, to send competitors and officials to the 2016 Surf Lifesaving World Titles in Noordwijk, in the Netherlands.

The surf club hopes to raise funds for the upcoming trip through community support.

The team consists of seven competitors and has a history of medalling at state, Australian and World Championships.

Mr Warren Peters, who has attended six Surf Lifesaving World Championships, said: "Competing at the World Championships is a great way to help other countries' competitors who do not have the heritage and experience that Australians have."

Mr David Thompson, who has attended nine World Championships, said he viewed global cooperation as a major draw for the event.

"What appeals to me most is the friendship of the international membership and the opportunity to visit different countries to experience their cultures."

The trivia night will have a variety of entertainment, and will include prizes, games, a dessert auction and photo booth.

Tickets are $15 per head.

Bookings can be made as a table of eight or as single entrants by contacting Ocean Beach Surf Club on 4344 2800.
