Peninsula identified as having high gambling risk

The NSW Government has identified the Peninsula as having a high gambling risk and will cap the number of poker machines at current levels.

The Peninsula has 768 poker machines or around one per every 46 people based on a population of around 36,000.

NSW Minister for Racing, Mr Paul Toole, who announced the caps on March 6 said, "Local community caps are an appropriate response to concerns that some areas have too many gaming machines.

"Local community caps are part of a package of reforms that represent the most significant changes to gambling regulation in NSW for a decade," he said.

Under proposed changes to the scheme, classifications will move from using local government area boundaries to Statistical Area Level 2 (SA2) boundaries.

SA2s are geographical boundaries set by the Australian Bureau of Statistics.

Each area will be classified as Band 1 (low risk), Band 2 (medium risk) and Band 3 (high risk and subject to an area cap).

The whole area of the Peninsula has been classified as Band 3 high risk so poker machines will be capped at current numbers.

In the area classified as Umina, Booker Bay and Patonga, there are three clubs and three hotels with 504 poker machines across 10 permits.

Woy Woy-Blackwall has three clubs and two hotels with an entitlement of 250 machines spread across four permits.

"The reforms include an overhaul of the Local Impact Assessment (LIA) scheme that regulates gaming machine movements," Mr Toole said.

 $\hbox{``These changes will deliver more'}\$

This map indicates that all gaming venues on the Peninsula will be subject to a new local cap transparency, more community consultation and greater certainty for industry," he said.

A leasing scheme will be introduced for gaming machines held by small hotels and clubs, providing a new pathway for them to go machine-free.

Regulation of clubs will be streamlined and tougher penalties introduced for directors who do the wrong thing.

"These reforms follow extensive consultation and represent a reset of the way gambling is regulated in NSW.

"They recognise concerns about gambling harm, while focusing regulation on where there is real risk," Mr Toole said.

The reforms come on top of changes in January to bolster the Responsible Gambling Fund to support responsible gambling and minimise the risk of gambling-related harm in the community.

A Umina grandmother has started a petition to get play equipment returned to the Brisbane Ave playground

Petition calls on council to reinstate play equipment

A Umina grandmother has started a petition for reinstatement of play equipment in the Brisbane Ave and Paul St playgrounds.

Ms Margaret Myles of Umina has also called on Central Coast Council to "stick by" its adopted Playground Strategy.

"On Monday, February 19, Council sent letters to residents within a 400m radius of our local park at Brisbane Ave, Umina, advising that removal of playground equipment would begin on the same day," Ms Margaret Myles said.

"Both sets of swings were removed on February 19, before the community had any chance to object to the removal of the playground equipment," she said.

Ms Myles decided to start a petition on change.org and, by March 6, 230 people had signed it.

"This park was once a fabulous local park that my now-grown children loved playing in, with swings, slides and a whirly ball.

"This park has been neglected to the point that prior to February 19, two old swing sets were all that was left.

"Despite this, my grandson loved to play at this park.

"This is the latest travesty of a Council that clearly places no importance on local recreation facilities for ratepayers.

"The Woy Woy Peninsula is already underprovided with local playground facilities.

"Why remove more?

"Paul St is another playground that comes to mind that was much needed by the residents in the vicinity.

"Now this area has no local parks within Central Coast Council, it is not good enough to advise the community that we can travel 2km to the Umina Recreation Precinct if we want to visit a park.

"Some residents do not have vehicles, and travelling on foot or by bicycle is difficult with children, because the state of our roads is so poor, and we lack access to bike paths.

"Council should provide a playground network that encourages more active lifestyles by offering well distributed and accessible recreation facilities.

"It is not good enough to not allow the community to have their say in the removal of these items.

"It is not good enough to claim that the removal was due to safety issues.

"If Council was genuinely concerned about safety in this park, it would have acted on the numerous complaints about tree branches overhanging the swings where children play.

"This was the only safety concern within this park.

"The swingsets were in good

"It is not good enough to prepare a Playground Strategy and not stick by it.

"Bring back the playground at Brisbane Ave, bring back the playground at Paul St and prioritise community-building over profits," she said.

Still more rain needed

A wet conclusion to February resulted in the Peninsula's rainfall for the second month of 2018 being 8.8 per cent above average but more rain is needed to keep drought at Umina resident, Mr Morrison, recorded 25.6mm of rain during the first nine days of March.

The greatest rainfall was recorded on March 6 when 22.5mm fell.

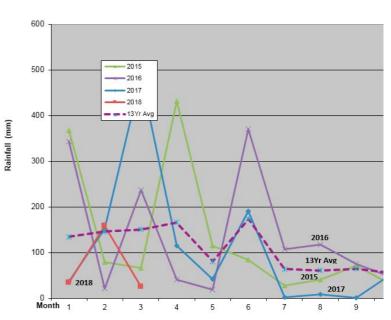

The other 3.1mm were recorded on March 7.

According to Mr Morrison's records the average March rainfall for the Peninsula is 151mm so there's a deficit of 125.4mm to make up over the remaining 22

The girl was treated at the scene by ambulance paramedics who stayed with her overnight.

She was airlifted from the site at about 12:30pm on February 26.

She was taken to Westmead Children's Hospital in a stable condition.

'Standards set out in DCP have not been complied with'

An application to build three townhouses in Augusta St, Umina, has been approved by Central Coast Council on March 2, with the application acknowledging that it did not comply with planning controls for setback and open space.

"It is clear that the numerical standards set out in the DCP have not been complied with on numerous occasions," the application stated.

"This DA relied on precedents, where the setback standards were not complied with in the Umina and Woy Woy areas.

"There is a lack of large sites and development is constrained to smaller sites where setback requirements are difficult to achieve with economic yield of dwellings.

"Consequently, the numerical standards may be viewed as overly restrictive for satisfactory medium density development to take place.

"It is therefore argued that the proposed development should be considered an acceptable proposal as it is in keeping with the DCP objectives."

The application claimed: "The Site for three new townhouses proposed development will make available affordable medium density residential housing for the community.

"The proposed setbacks are the most suitable solutions to the existing site constraints," it said.

"The proposal will rejuvenate the site and complement the desired form, orientation and scale of surrounding properties.

"Recently the adjacent property 4 Augusta St has been approved for a multi-unit development with similar design, setbacks and site cover."

The site has a land area of 847 square metres and currently comprises a single storey brick house.

According to application, the first townhouse will have side entry on the ground floor.

The ground floor will include the kitchen, dining, living and master bedroom, laundry, guest toilet and storage.

The first floor will accommodate another lounge room, three bedrooms, linen and bathroom.

A ground floor courtyard will be accessed from the living room and the dwelling will have a double garage with internal access.

The second townhouse will also have side entry via a porch on the ground floor.

The ground floor will include kitchen and dining, both of which will have access to a courtyard.

A living room, laundry, guest toilet and storage will also be located on the ground floor.

The master bedroom, two other bedrooms, a lounge room, bathroom and linen cupboard will be on the first floor and townhouse two will have a single garage.

The third residence will have the same layout as townhouse one.

Council grants six non-complying DAs in three months

Central Coast Council has admitted it approved six development applications on and around the Peninsula between October and December that didn't comply with development standards.

On October 18, Council approved a development application for alterations and additions to a home in Helmsman Bvd, St Huberts Island.

Approval required a variation to the standard for floor space ratio by 2.6 per cent.

It was justified by Council as minor and did "not affect the overall bulk and scale of the development". Another residential alteration at Killcare was approved on November 10 with a 25 per cent variation to the standard for building height.

It was justified on the basis that the "dwelling additions remained at the same height of the existing dwelling house, impacts considered acceptable".

An 11.7 per cent variation to the building heights standard was granted for a multi-unit project in Ocean View Rd, Ettalong, on November 17.

"In order to achieve suitable drainage across the site the height of the proposal has been increased," was the stated justification for the variation.

The standard for minimum lot sizes for attached dwellings was varied to approve a multi-unit residential project in Hillview St, Woy Woy.

In this instance the 2.5 per cent variation was deemed minor "and the proposed development provides sufficient space for landscaping setbacks and amenity".

A 5.3 per cent variation to the standard for building heights was given to a project at 53 Greenhaven Dr, Umina, because "the slope of the land means it would be difficult to meet the building height development standard and there will be no impact on amenity of neighbours or streetscape and seeks to minimise the cut and fill on the site".

In December, a single new home in Bay View Cres, Blackwall, was approved with a 15.3 per cent variation to the building height.

The justification was "the steep topography of the land makes it difficult to achieve moderate floor area without exceeding the height limits".

Developments on the Peninsula are still determined using the Gosford Local Environmental Plan 2014.

It permits some variations to standards provided they "achieve better outcomes for and from the development by allowing flexibility in particular circumstances".

"In each case, the relevant development application must address the objectives of the development standard being varied," according to a report by staff to the February 26 meeting of Central Coast Council.

"Council requires that a written request to vary a development standard be considered in each case, which must address...why compliance with the development standard is unreasonable or unnecessary ... and that there are sufficient environmental planning grounds to justify contravening the development standard," the report

Chairman's Report

Everyone needs clean drinking water, humans and wildlife alike. It is a food. Recent announcements on Wallarah 2 coal mine and the Kangy Angy Railyards are likely to be bad news for people and Platypus.

The Wallarah 2 approval provides for the discharge of large quantities of contaminated mining water into our drinking water catchment. It is claimed that the water will be treated by Reverse Osmosis (RO) to high standard to remove dissolved solids. RO is a water treatment technology which reduces contamination in one half of a water flow by increasing concentrations in the other half of a water flow. The health effects of drinking water from mines is unknown, uncertain and long term.

Meanwhile, the contracts have been let for the Kangy Angy Railyards. Platypus and frogs downstream are about to be subject to a major industrial development which will change and probably destroy their habitat. It permanently destroys approximately 16 Ha. of sensitive wetland being one of only three locations where Mahony's Toadlet is known to occur. The land was originally obtained by council and zoned E2 to permanently protect the wetland values.

In both cases Sustainability goes backwards as these developments have permanent and long lasting effects. Residents, their children and the natural environment will bear the legacy.

Construction certificate issued for multi-dwelling project

A construction certificate has been issued to enable commencement of a multidwelling housing project at 9 Priestman Ave, Umina.

Existing structures will demolished on the 720 square metre block and replaced with three units with works estimated to cost $550,000.

Approved by Central Coast Council in September 2017, the project required significant variations from the requirements of the Gosford Development Control Plan 2013.

According to Council's assessment report for the project, it required variations of between 40 per cent and 75 per cent to setbacks, a 38 per cent variation to car parking and a 29 per cent variation to articulation.

Each unit will contain two bedrooms and a single garage.

According to the assessment report, the applicant had submitted a written request stating that compliance with the development standard was unreasonable and unnecessary in this instance as the non-

An aerial view of the 720 square metre site on Priestman Ave, Umina

compliance would have no effect on adjoining properties and noting the variation would allow three two-bedroom units rather than two three-bedroom

"In assessing the applicant's submission, it is noted that the proposal was well within the allowed floor space ratio and height limits under Gosford LEP 2014.

"The proposal is consistent with the development density, scale and style of medium density residential development supported by Council on similar sized land parcels in the Peninsula.

"From the street, the proposal will have a similar appearance to surrounding developments.

"The proposal would be within the environmental capacity of the land and not be detrimental to the surrounding properties or the public domain.

"Despite the minor variation, the development is not considered to impact on the amenity of residents or adjoining properties.

"Being single storey units, the development will not adversely impact on adjoining properties in terms of privacy or overshadowing.

"The proposal is generally consistent with development controls for multi-dwelling housing.

"It is considered that the extent of the variation is insignificant and the lot size is adequate to accommodate the proposed multi-dwelling housing development without compromising external and internal amenity.

"The proposal is consistent with the objectives of the zone and character of the area, is of high quality design, incorporates articulation and detailing and is consistent with the bulk and scale of development on similar lot sizes in the area.

"The applicant's written request has adequately justified that compliance with the development standard is unreasonable and unnecessary in this instance and there are sufficient environmental planning grounds to justify contravening the development standard," the assessment report concluded.

Endangered bushland is not 'significant' to Council

Endangered bushland on the Peninsula has not been recognised as regionally significant, despite being gazetted as endangered at a State level.

Umina Coastal Sandplain Woodland has been gazetted Species Threatened legislation as an "ecologically endangered community".

It only exists to any significant extent on the Peninsula, and is one of the smallest endangered woodland communities in the State.

A list of regionally significant vegetation adopted at the last meeting of Central Coast Council included 23 vegetation communities and sub-communities but did not include Umina Coastal Sandplain Woodland.

Council staff confirmed that the woodland was not included on the register.

Mayor Cr Jane Smith said that the woodland was not currently on the significant vegetation register but that it was defined as significant.

"It is not on that list but it is an Ecologically Endangered Community so it does have protection through other legislation and I think that is important to understand

A sign erected by the former Gosford Council near Umina Oval called Umina Coastal Sandplain Woodland a natural treasure

"I would like it to be included a bit more prominently in our policy," Cr Smith said.

Cr Richard Mehrtens, whose ward includes the Peninsula, has called for it to be included on the register.

The Ettymalong Creek Landcare Group called for the list of regionally significant vegetation to be expanded to include all ecologically endangered communities in the Central Coast including but not limited to the Umina woodland, Swamp Oak Floodplain Forest of the NSW Northern Coast Sydney Basin and SE corner bioregions, Swamp Schlerophyll Forest on Coastal Floodplains of the NSW North Coast Sydney Basin and SE Corner Bioregions and Narrabeen Coastal Blackbutt Forest.

Cr Smith said she was hopeful that Central Coast Council would eventually have an urban forest

"It is probably a bit premature but I am getting emails about Council building an urban forest policy including public land and street plantings," she said.

"I know our staff are working on that kind of policy and I think that is a really important thing."

Liberal and Labor lobby for position on dredge purchase

Liberal and Labor councillors are claiming the moral high ground after a motion to take steps to purchase a "super dredge" was defeated at a council meeting on February 26

Liberal Cr Jilly Pilon has called on the Central Coast Council to take ownership, responsibility and action to fix Brisbane Water channel by buying the dredge.

Labor Cr Richard Mehrtens, while claiming to support the intent of the motion, said: "Committing to buy a dredge is a major decision and one that shouldn't be taken lightly.

"A late-night motion, with no cost or budget plan, doesn't set a good precedent for future decisions."

Cr Pilon and Cr Greg Best moved the motion that called for Council to note "with alarm the likely closure of the Brisbane Water channel due to mass tidal sand migration".

The motion asked Council to "recognise the imperative of dealing with the issue urgently due to the likely impact on the environment, tourism and flooding risks".

They called on their fellow councillors to "in principal agree to acquire a suitable sea-going super dredge to deal with the Brisbane Water Channel and estuaries".

The dredge would also be used to service the channel to Tuggerah Lakes at The Entrance.

The motion asked for staff to report on suitable dredge options, the acquisition process and budget requirements for 2018-19.

Central Coast Ferries owner Mr George Conway addressed the meeting but could not persuade councillors to vote in favour of acquiring a dredge.

"Consistently vessels are running aground in the channel," Mr Conway said.

"Masters are having problems where they are grounding on a daily basis and they are in a position where they are frightened to report because they are facing prosecution from the Australian Maritime Safety Authority," he said.

He said there appeared to be no permanent solution for keeping the channel open even though it was a transport corridor to Sydney and spoke of the anxiety being suffered by his professional ferry masters and those employed by Palm Beach Ferries.

"One hundred years ago, they were dredging channels with old technology and we have modern technology able to do the work for modest cost," he said.

"I feel sure there are options for the material to be removed entirely from the channel between Box Head and Half Tide Rocks that could be taken and used to replenish beaches around the Central Coast.

"The operation last year removed material from the unnatural channel but it is likely to go back to where it was removed from," Mr Conway said, calling the NSW Government's emergency dredging a "band aid fix".

He said his vessels were also touching bottom daily at the entrance to Woy Woy channel.

Mr Conway said the Ettalong Channel was basically closed at low tide as Palm Beach ferries had to divert to Patonga.

"These ferries are bringing prosperity to the area. They are bringing people to Ettalong," he said.

During the debate of the motion, Council director Mr Mike Dowling said the council did not have licences to dredge some of the areas identified.

He said the council had made three grant applications to the NSW Government including the purchase of a dredge but there had been "no reply from the State Government".

Mr Dowling said the Brisbane Water channel was a State responsibility.

He said the minimum cost to purchase a dredge would be between $12 million and $20 million.

"If the resolution directed Council [staff] to purchase a dredge it could be any amount of money depending on the size of the dredge needed to complete the operation," he said.

Mayor Cr Jane Smith said the matter should be deferred for a detailed briefing.

"I get the feeling councillors are not across the issues here," she said.

Cr Smith said the matter of whether the channel was a State or council responsibility remained "in dispute".

"There are letters flying around the place for both sides of the argument," she said.

Cr Best and Pilon lost the vote on the floor and Cr Smith's suggestion to defer the matter was carried.

However, after the meeting, Cr Pilon issued a media release stating that the current situation in the Brisbane Water estuary and the Ettalong channel has resulted in uncertainty for businesses, ferry operators, commuters, fisherman, tourists and residents who used the waterway.

"We cannot ignore the adverse effect this issue is having on people's lives and the economy," Cr Pilon said.

Our choked waterways at Ettalong are affecting tourism, employment, transport and land values on the Coast as well as adding to the flood risk of homes around our waterways," she said.

Cr Pilon, who is a Liberal Councillor, said that NSW Minister for Lands and Forestry, Mr Paul Toole had confirmed, dredging of the Ettalong Channel was the responsibility of Central Coast Council and that the New South Wales Government was not responsible for maintaining local waterways.

She said the Ports and Maritime Administration Act 1995, clearly stipulated that as the Central Coast had no commercial ports or stateowned maritime infrastructure, the waterways were the responsibility of local government.

"Our waterways, effectively, are no different to our roads," she said.

"Much like the road system, where we pay for registration and licence fees, there are roads that are a Federal responsibility, roads that are a State responsibility and roads that are a local government responsibility.

"It's been stated by some councillors, that because the Roads and Maritime Services collects boating fees and charges for maritime activities, that the State Government is responsible for dredging and a dredging machine.

"That argument is flawed in the same way the State collects fees for road licences and registrations.

"Council still has its own local roads it is responsible for just as it has local waterways it is responsible for, including the Ettalong Channel.

"The NSW Government has a Coastal Dredging Strategy.

"Twice in the last year, the State Government has provided funds for emergency dredging works at Ettalong.'

Cr Pilon said she thanked the State Government for the assistance but it was a "band-aid fix" and Council needed to take additional responsibility.

Emergency dredging at the mouth of Brisbane Water, September 2017

"It is therefore imperative that our Central Coast Council continues to work constructively with the State Government for grants that do exist such as the Rescuing Our Waterways grant which has been available since 2011," Cr Pilon said.

"A huge part of why we find ourselves in the predicament we are in at Ettalong Channel and Brisbane Water is the former Gosford City Council rarely applied and therefore received minimal funding for this periodic dredging

She said a Council-acquired dredge would provide it with full control of its use.

"We could ensure waterways are kept open and safe, keep beaches open year round for tourism with a steady flow of replenishment, and boost our tourism industry with sand groynes providing great waves for surfers.

"The dredge could be leased to other Councils when not required for our local waterways.'

Cr Pilon said Gosford Council had spent a significant sum of money to develop and adopt a comprehensive Coastal Zone Management Plan that included a detailed dredging plan for Brisbane Water out to Box Head in 2009.

"Why was this dredging never

"It is time to move forward, Central Coast residents are tired of

Meanwhile, Labor's Cr Richard Mehrtens said he believed dredging was one of the most important issues facing the Peninsula.

"Committing to buy a dredge is a major decision and one that shouldn't be taken lightly," Cr Mehrtens said.

"I fully support the intent behind the motion moved at Council on

"But with no budget, and no costs laid out in the motion, it would be irresponsible to sign a blank cheque to Council staff," he

"The estimate that was given on costs was in excess of $20 million, and that is not an amount of money Council should spend without proper and current advice.

"Deferring the motion will give us an opportunity to get answers to important questions, including whether or not purchasing and maintaining a dredge is the right thing for Council to do.

"While the State Government has spent $15.5 million over the last three years along the rest of the NSW coastline, but is unwilling to invest enough money to do it right on the Coast, then I will continue to push the State Government to contribute their fair share," Cr Mehrtens said.

"I support the Council's decision to apply for NSW Government funding to conduct local dredging, and we should be fighting for every last cent we can get out of this government.

"We need to get this issue right. but a late-night motion, with no cost or budget plan doesn't set a good precedent for future decisions.

"I will continue to fight for this issue, and I look forward to voting in support of a strong and considered motion when it comes back to Council in the near future.' SOURCE:

Both the NSW Government cycles," Cr Holstein said. and Central Coast Council need to look for innovative solutions to ensuring local remain waterways safe to navigate, according to Central Coast deputy mayor, Cr Chris Holstein.

Cr Holstein said if current NSW law meant funding for dredging fell through the gap between Council and State government then perhaps law reform was needed.

"I was serious when I asked in Council who wrote the legislation?

"If it is wrong then change it," he said.

Councillors were divided at their February 26 meeting when debating whether or not to purchase a dredge.

Liberal Councillors argued that the Ettalong channel was a Central Coast Council responsibility the independent whereas councillors, including Cr Holstein and mayor, Cr Jane Smith, remained convinced that the NSW Government should be providing some funding.

Cr Holstein said if both council and state government were prepared to "think innovatively" then a small amount of money from moorings, jetties, boat licences etc, could be diverted into a fund to pay for dredging, gross pollution traps and other perennial maintenance tasks to keep Ettalong and Woy Woy channels safe.

Council is procrastinating, says Chamber

Central Coast Council is procrastinating over the Ettalong Channel, according to the Peninsula Chamber of Commerce

The Chamber has expressed disappointment with the council's delay in deciding to buy a dredge.

"We just want action," said Chamber president Mr Matthew

"Yet again we see further procrastination by this Council over the issue of purchasing a dredge to deal with the constant silting and closure of the Ettalong channel and massive erosion of Ocean Beach.

"It was evident from last night's debate that there is a massive lack of understanding by the councillors over the Brisbane Water estuary issues and relevant responsibilities over the channel," Mr Wales said.

"Despite the best attempts by Cr Greg Best and Cr Rebecca Gail-Collins to get the motion up, the councillors watered down the motion for yet more briefings, more legal advice, more studies and more costings," he said.

"Council has also advised that it currently has three grant applications before the NSW State Government, one of which includes the purchase of a dredge.

"It is my understanding that the NSW State Government has made it very clear to the Council that it does not provide funds for infrastructure such as dredges.

"Its role is to fund the operation of that infrastructure.

"Further, the NSW Government has made it clear to the Council that the Ettalong Channel and estuary are the Council's responsibility but is still prepared to co-fund the dredging operation.

"While the Council continues to procrastinate, the Ettalong Channel gets worse on a daily basis, the Ocean Beach foreshore continues to erode and our tourism industry continues to suffer.

"The day is fast approaching when Palm Beach Ferries will have to seriously look at the ongoing viability of the Ettalong service.

"No commercial operator is going to risk an accident in that channel while the Council continues to delay making a decision on the long term solution to the problem.

"The Chamber doesn't care who is financially responsible for the channel.

"Whether it is rates or state taxes, it's all our money.

"The time for further delays has passed," he said.

Water users at Lobster Beach on Australia Day

No jetski incidents were reported

No jetski incidents were reported on the Bouddi Peninsula over the Australia Day long weekend, according to the Wagstaffe-Killcare Community Association.

"Fortunately no incidents were reported in our area, though Lobster Beach was packed with craft of all descriptions and there was virtually no room at all for swimmers," said president Ms Peta Colebatch.

"We will continue to keep this issue under review.

"At our next community meeting on March 12, Arlene Bridges will be attending to let us know what action she and others in the Council area are taking.

Ms Colebatch said: "Concerns have been raised in the past about the use of jetskis on our beaches, and the antisocial behaviour by some.

"Prior to the Australia Day long weekend, we wrote to the Minister to seek additional attention to this on the long weekend, and this was followed by discussions with Maritime Services, who increased patrols over that weekend."

Woy Woy tip to get upgrades

Woy Woy tip is to get an upgrade to its closed circuit television costing $85,000 and a fitout to its office costing $78,000 before the end of June.

The work has been brought forward from next financial year, together with a project for cell construction and cover material which has been allocated $178,000 extra.

The Woy Woy tip was expected to reach capacity and be ready for "restoration" by 2032.

At the time of Gosford Council's dismissal, $4.33 million had been allocated as a provision for reinstatement, rehabilitation and restoration of the tip at Woy Woy.

It is understood Buttonderry tip in the old Wyong Shire has enough capacity to service the whole region so the urgency to find another site to replace Woy Woy appears to have dissipated.

Six projects were listed.

Woy Woy's Lions Park shelter will be replaced this financial year at a cost of $45,000.

Ettalong's Lemon Grove netball courts will be floodlit sooner than

A roof will be constructed over the courtyard at Umina Library, costing $20,000.

The Peninsula Theatre's house lighting will be replaced at a cost of $15,000.

Award recipient objects to nursing home

The man who received an Australia Day award from Central Coast Council for his work with the environment has written to the council opposing a proposal to build a nursing home in endangered bushland in Hillview St, Woy Woy.

The proposal, submitted by Thompson Health Care, is to build a three-storey, 160-bed nursing home on land which contains bushland known as Umina Coastal Sandplain Woodland.

The objection to the proposal from Mr Norm Harris was the first to be logged on the Council's development application tracker.

In his submission, he said the issue would probably outlive the Central Coast Council and would rival a local planning incident at Koolewong, known as the Taj Mahal, for notoriety.

"I estimate the total costs borne by council to be $15 million," the submission stated.

"Item B4 of Council's policy for determining development applications subject to significant objection states

'submissions assist Council in being aware of relevant issues and community concerns when determining an application'.

"This comment first generates laughter, quickly followed with despair.

'The unique, rare endangered ecological community, Sandplain Umina Coastal Woodland, on the site, is at risk of damage with any activity except from approved Bushcare consultants and accredited volunteers.

"Check any construction site and observe the first action of commencement is to clear the site of all vegetation.

"Any development on the site will require increased inspections ensure the endangered Woodland is protected.

"The vegetation on the site was at risk of being denuded; that risk is existing," the submission said.

March 15 is the closing date for public submissions on the proposal.

Prices for Ethanol 94 (E10) on the Peninsula on Wednesday, March 9

Fuel prices continue to be up to 35 cents higher

Peninsula fuel prices have been up to 35 cents per litre higher than those charged in nearby Kariong, West Gosford, Erina and Kincumber in recent weeks.

At the time of going to press, the cheapest price for Ethanol 94 (E10) on the Central Coast was 115.9 cents per litre at the Wadalba 7-Eleven and United North Wyong.

The most expensive price for Ethanol 94 was 148.9 at BP Woy Woy with Coles Express Umina and Woy Woy not far behind at 148.4 cents per litre.

The United Petroleum station was charging only 124.7 cents per charging only 116.9 cents per litre for its Ethanol 94 on Wednesday, March 6.

Most other West Gosford and Kariong outlets had their pumps set at 124-125.9 cents per litre.

Member for Robertson Ms Lucy Wicks said she continued to gather petitions from locals who wished to pass on their concerns about fuel prices to the Australian Competition and Consumer Commission.

Ms Wicks said she regularly contacted the Australian Competition and Consumer Commission to inform it that the Peninsula's petrol prices appeared at odds with the rest of the Central Coast region.

"I am preparing to write to them again as constituents have been calling with their concerns," she said.

According to Ms Wicks, the Commission has authority to look into areas where there were pricing discrepancies but has not examined the Peninsula as yet.

The petrol pricing petition is available from Ms Wicks' office and

She said she was aware that inflated fuel prices on the Peninsula made it especially challenging for elderly residents on restricted licenses.

Umina Skate Park

Petition calls for skate park upgrade

A community organisation is campaigning to have the Umina Beach Skate Park upgraded.

The Umina Community Group has launched a petition for the upgrade of the skate park and is calling on the Umina community and wider Peninsula to sign it.

"This petition is to demonstrate support and to prove that there is a genuine local need to upgrade the Umina Beach Skate Park," said Umina Community Group vice president, Mr Mark Nitsos.

"We believe that Umina (and the surrounding suburbs of Ettalong, Woy Woy, Daley's Point and so on) deserve a top-quality skate park that is free-to-use, safe, inclusive and family-orientated, which caters for users of all ages and abilities.

"The skate park as it stands is worn out and too small to support the large local skate and scooter community as well as the many additional visitors it entertains.

"Our aim is to gain a commitment from Central Coast Council to access grant funding and allocate funding available in the Council Strategic Plan to improve the poor flow and safety of the park, increase its size, to add essentials such as bins, shade, seating, and blubbers and to repair the BMX track and basketball court, thus to recreate Umina Beach Skate Park as world class sporting precinct for our community and visitors."

Holstein to seek council support for rail underpass

Deputy mayor Cr Chris Holstein is to formally seek council's support to reengage the NSW Government in talks to replace the Rawson Rd railway level crossing.

Cr Holstein said he will take a motion to the March 12 council meeting calling for the level crossing project to be reconsidered by council and the NSW Government.

"Quite simply, I am bringing the issue back to the table and, in an election year, calling the NSW Government back to the table," he said.

"It has not and it will not go away.

"It is still a safety issue and it is still a transport and access issue for the Peninsula so we have got to address the issue."

Cr Holstein said he would also be encouraging discussions about the project with the NSW Labor Opposition. "I believe the Shadow Minister for the Central Coast, Mr David Harris, has already said he would be doing something," he said.

"We can build tunnels under Sydney Harbour so surely we can build a 200 metre wide tunnel under the railway line."

The NSW Government withdrew funding for the project in 2016.

Floating pontoons should replace wharf, says Mehrtens

A floating pontoon should be the preferred option for the replacement of the Woy Woy public wharf, according to Cr Richard Mehrtens.

The poor state of the wharf was debated by Central Coast Council at it meeting on February 26 but no clear plan of action for fixing or replacing the wharf was resolved.

Council director Mr Mike Dowling said: "We have a grant funding application currently before the State Government and indications are they are looking at it favourably but we haven't had a date as yet of when that will be determined."

Mr Dowling said there were issues with disabled access and the design of the replacement wharf.

"We have to be very careful to maintain access all through the year and we are looking at a range of designs, including a floating wharf and a floating pontoon," he

Cr Mehrtens said he had attended an inspection of the wharf with deputy mayor Cr Chris Holstein and mayor Cr Jane Smith.

"My concern after the briefing was that despite floating pontoons being the preferred model at Ettalong and at the new Koolewong Wharf, it wasn't necessarily going to be the preferred model at Woy Woy," Cr Mehrtens said.

"A floating pontoon needs to be the best standard of practice...so I would ask that a report provides the cost difference between a floating pontoon and whatever the other standard might be," he said.

"I felt uncomfortable leaving the briefing that a floating pontoon was not going to be the solution.

"It was appalling to be standing there on the king tide watching as these people were trying to disembark.

"We get the argument it only happens once or twice a year but it has been four times in the past two months.

"Every other wharf that has had an upgrade on the Coast has got a floating pontoon," Cr Mehrtens said

Cr Greg Best called on staff to report to a future Council meeting on the current situation with Woy Woy wharf and options available to council to address situation in partnership with the State.

Cr Holstein said disability access was one of a range of issues that needed to be addressed as part of any proposal or State funding to replace the wharf.

Other issues, according to Cr Holstein, included foreshore stabilisation and weather protection.

"When we had that meeting, on February 4, I was told we would have an answer in a couple of weeks," Cr Holstein said.

Central Coast Ferries owner Mr George Conway said his business had a NSW Government contract to take passengers from the wharf.

"Unfortunately the old wharf at Woy Woy is not up to modern-day standard.

"We have problems with disabled access to the point where on a hide tide we can't get people in a wheel chair onto the vessel because of the angle of the boarding ramp," Mr Conway said.

"The wharf is rotten," he said.

"It has been patched up with sticky tape for years.

"The numbers sprouted to rectify the problem are ridiculous because the wharf replacement with a floating platform would not be that expensive.

"They did it at Ettalong," he said. SOURCE: Central Coast Council agenda Item 5.2, 26 Feb 2018

No start date for on-demand bus service, says Tesch start date for the Peninsula's on-demand bus service has yet to be announced, seven months after it was announced, according to Member for Gosford Ms Liesl Tesch.

"While services are up and running in Sydney, Peninsula commuters have been left behind again by the Liberal Government," she said.

Ms Tesch said that while the Northern Beaches have a whole new B-Line bus service costing tax payers more than $600 million but Peninsula residents were still waiting on our local on-demand service.

"We are a community crying out for better transport services and links, but the Government can't get their heads out of Manly where ondemand buses are already picking up passengers."

With an on-demand service already being trialled by private operators in Lake Macquarie and facing teething problems, Ms

Tesch said this was an opportunity to get it right.

"We can see the lessons and the struggles that regions similar to ours are having with on-demand services, and a lot of them relate to the community not knowing about the service," Ms Tesch said.

"One media release seven months ago isn't enough to make sure that the thousands of commuters on the Peninsula know that this service will be coming sometime in the future and we need the government to give locals a timeline on when we can start downloading the app and signing up for a pick up.

"Right now, any information from the Government about this service would be helpful for the community."

Ms Tesch said she had moved a motion in the NSW Parliament calling on the government to release more information, and to get the program up and running.

I pass over his defence of developers.

I don't imagine that anybody believes developers have anything in mind beyond a profitable investment, and it is purely coincidental if their goals happen to be of community benefit as well.

with Robin Boyd (one of our most distinguished architects) who coined the word to describe exactly the kind of thing that is happening on the Peninsula.

I am quite sure he is correct that council staff members work hard to see that applications conform to codes and standards, but the problem is that this is clearly not

On the one hand, we have the report on your front page that Council has approved 14 nonconforming developments on the Peninsula and, on the other hand, we have the fact that many people are unhappy with developments that are conforming, leading to the conclusion that the codes and standards do not meet the need.

If the codes and standards were correct, there wouldn't have to be any non-conforming developments, and people would be satisfied with the results of applying them.

Incidentally, it is worth pointing out as well that Council staff wouldn't have to "work hard", if we had appropriate and transparent codes and standards for them to

I would suggest that most of the hard work arises from applications that don't meet the codes and standards, because developers are trying to bypass them to increase their profits.

Finally, I am, of course, well aware that two councillors can bring an application to council for consideration.

However, I doubt that many would want to rely on the support of councillors Best, Pilon, Marquart, McLachlan and Collins when these representatives don't want council to consider an application unless there are 50 objectors.

Most councillors are beholden to their political parties for their seats and only marginally to their ward residents, so why would they spontaneously take up an application with fewer than the required number of objections?

This is the kind of "safeguard" that sounds plausible but is actually almost meaningless.

In fact, it would be enlightening to know how many such referrals to council have taken place.

While I am about it, may I comment on Mr Wales' contention that investment in a $20M oceangoing dredge would be a wise allocation in the 2018/2019 budget ("Council should spend $20 million on dredge, says Chamber", PN439).

Perhaps, he is right, but how did he come to this conclusion?

Where is the information on capital and operating costs (a dredge once bought is an ongoing expenditure commitment)?

Where is the technical analysis of the number of days a dredge would be required each year?

Where is the cost-benefit calculation on ownership against contracting-out?

Who says that Noosa has made a sensible decision in buying a dredge?

Mr Wales is allowed to have an unsubstantiated opinion on such a highly technical matter, and I'm not allowed to have an architectural opinion based on 60 years' experience in the profession?

Hmmm?

Precedence is not acceptable for flaunting the rules

It is no surprise that a recent Development Application to Council is citing 14 previous applications that have been approved, despite their not complying with current planning controls for setbacks, parking and open space, as their argument as to why theirs should be approved as well.

I don't believe that precedence is an acceptable argument either by the developer or the Council for a development applications to be approved, given it flaunts the rules.

The assumption is that medium housing density is a "given" and that current council planning guidelines and local community input should be disregarded and adjusted to suit developer intent.

Flood level can be a matter of life and death

I applaud Council's decision consider making submission on the plan to redevelop Woy Woy Bowling Club (Peninsula News edition

Firstly, it is right for an elected Council to consider the matter because it, unlike the JRPP and Council staff, has a responsibility and is answerable to the community, which is overwhelmingly opposed to this development.

But there is another compelling reason.

Elected Council has no greater responsibility than its duty of care for the wellbeing of residents, and especially of our most vulnerable residents in aged care, and housing for seniors or people with a disability.

Those of us who reside near Woy Woy Bowling Club know that the greatest threat to wellbeing is the frequent flooding of surrounding streets during king tides and coastal storms.

A recent Bureau of Meteorology study revealed that flooding during past storms has caused 150 deaths on the coast between Taree and Wollongong, and warned that "if such events were to occur today they would have catastrophic impacts due to the massive increase in urban development".

From the council website, we

learn that approximately 50 per cent of deaths are caused by people trying to escape from a flood affected area via vehicle or on foot.

This explains why Gosford Development Control Plan 2013 requires that for seniors housing in flood-prone areas: "floor levels, whether habitable or nonhabitable, are to be above the PMF (Probable Maximal Flood) flood level", and that "all access roads and driveways, and external parking areas are to be above the PMF to provide the ability to safely receive and evacuate occupants or contents without having to cross floodwaters of any depth in all flood events".

The Woy Woy Bowling Club application does not comply with these requirements.

These are matters of potential life and death for senior residents.

An underground carpark as proposed that is more than two metres below current street level seems a potential death-trap in any future tidal or storm-related flood.

Thankyou Councillors Mehrtens, Smith and co for putting the interests of residents first.

'Significant' applies to issues raised, not numbers

Why has the matter of the development application policy subject to "significant public objection" remained unresolved since July 2016?

Firstly, the use of the term "significant" in a policy based on numbers is wrong.

"Significant" applies to issues raised and can apply to a single objection.

The council has simplified the assessment process by applying this term to numbers only, conveniently avoiding a description that will engage the public.

At the council meeting on February 12, there were shared opinions about submission numbers relevant to areas with low population density and the inability to reach quota numbers for referral to a council meeting.

It is my understanding from the discussion that councillors agreed that this issue would be addressed in the policy.

I have failed to find any reference to areas with low population numbers.

Has this been omitted from the policy?

The policy contains constant reference to the number 50 or near and adheres to previous unacceptable administration standards.

My understanding from the meeting was the number of objections would be reduced to 15 and with no fine print referring to situations requiring 50 objections.

Is this not the case?

In July 2016, Council administrator Mr Ian Reynolds proposed a number of more than 100 public submissions to be eligible for higher assessment.

Simplification of the assessment process was justified on the basis that it was impossible for a single administrator to personally manage a huge local government area with a population such as ours.

The "significant public objection" policy continues the simplification of the assessment process raising the same questions.

Is the local government area too big for the council and councillors to responsibly administer?

The policy follows the businessper-usual approach, meaning simplification of documents to reduce council's management time and costs, while further disengaging the public.

This leads to a confusing situation.

While on the one hand the council accepts and assesses non-complying applications confirming that development is supported based on vague planning instruments, on the other hand there are clear and precise numbers for submissions.

However when discussing development proposals, variations, trade-offs, bonuses and so on are standard practice.

Let this assessment standard apply to public submissions.

Advertising in the foyer of the Gosford office promotes staff support for the lodgement of development applications.

This service is not provided to objectors.

Why not?

The policy is convoluted and favours the council not the public.

After years of questionable local government administration, the public will not trust the Central Coast Council and councillors until it has been proven without doubt that trust is well-founded and enduring.

Planning democracy? Not from this council

Mathew Wales' claim that reducing the number of DA objections required to trigger a referral to Council will "impede the orderly development we need" is, of course, patent nonsense.

Orderly development is not a planning policy and, if Mr Wales considers what is happening in the Peninsula's backyards to be orderly development, he really needs some help.

Ad hoc, ill-conceived, poorlydesigned granny flats make a mockery of the so-called planning of the Peninsula.

You can't drive down some lanes at night and rubbish is piled in heaps beside the broken down cars, while residents have to drag their rubbish bins half a block to the nearest side street for the weekly pick up.

Mr Wales' further assertion that "Council staff who assess and liaise with applicants to ensure that such developments meet all the require code and standards" (Insulting to building industry and council planners, Peninsula News 439) is astonishing.

Mr Wales in his haste to read his and others published letters and comment has missed your front page articles on a monthly basis.

For example, "Another non-complying application is lodged," Peninsula News 439.

Developers are so used to getting any shonky buildings they like through Gosford Council they aren't even bothering to give council the courtesy. Why would they?

This Central Coast Council is no better, just Gosford Council but bigger and more disinterested.

While developers are flaunting council processes, council and developer spruikers like Mr Wales are actively seeking to stop residents involving themselves in the democratic process.

Considering that the 15 objections required to bring a non-complying development before council is inadequate (because all development is good development), these people now want a return to 50 responses before they act.

The reality is that only the near neighbours, typically five adjoining, are notified so someone has to have the time and nous to wrangle up some objectors and you usually get a fortnight.

Once the objections are in, that is it.

You then have to constantly ring the planner responsible for updates while the developer reads your submissions then has access to Council staff to "assess and liaise" ways around your objections.

Objections are usually "ill-informed" and variations are conveniently allowed which are invariably "well-founded and minor".

Objectors then find out about it by mail or by reading about it in the paper.

In my recent experience, a "minor" variation allows a twostorey monstrosity to shade my entire property and my neighbours breakfast area at mid-winter.

The non-complying side setback should be double what is being allowed.

Due process? Planning democracy?

Not from this council.

The most streets without footpaths?

Is this a record?

In an area of 16.6 square kilometers, one of the most densely populated areas of regional NSW, 70 streets (and still counting) with no footpaths or kerbing in Woy Woy, Umina, Ettalong, Blackwall and Booker Bay.

Mothers with young children, the infirm and everyday pedestrians risking their lives by having to walk out into the traffic to get around vehicles trailers and so on that are parked willy nilly on the unmade footpaths.

Ratepayers' money has gone down the drain with bad Council investments, with Peninsula ratepayers paying to have other suburbs upgraded in the Gosford Shire.

The Peninsula deserves to be the prime residential area of the Gosford Shire.

It is not good enough to just have patch up jobs done on the roads as documented by our deputy mayor Holstein.

A genuine effort to totally upgrade dozens of these roads needs to be implemented immediately.

Disability service provider opens homes at Booker Bay new contemporary homes for people living with disability have been formally opened at Booker Bay on February 27.

NSW Minister for Disability Services Mr Ray Williams officially opened the residences on behalf of local disability service provider, Fairhaven Services

The two and three bedroom villas in Booker Bay will be home to five women, four of whom have been living in the local community during the construction phase.

The villas were the result of a project that the NSW Department of Family and Community Services (Ageing, Disability and Home Care) funded as part of a NSW Government Large Residential Devolution Project Centre initiative and which commenced at Fairhaven's Kincumber site in Fairhaven chief Ms Monique Cardon said: "The construction was delayed due to the cultural sensitivity of the site, but we have been able to work with archaeologists and the local Darkinjung community understand the importance of the land and surrounds.

"The site will be treated with respect," Ms Cardon said.

"The two villas feature spacious bedrooms, accessible bathrooms, shared living areas, fully equipped kitchens, modern facilities and large courtyard areas.

"The back yard has been protected and will be accessible to the local Aboriginal community in consultation with Fairhaven and Contemporary living options manager Ms Janie Cruickshank said: "These homes have been designed to support community inclusion for our residents and are located close to shops, clubs and a local movie theatre.

"Our residents are supported with 24-hour care by Fairhaven staff," Ms Cruickshank said.

"The smaller living environment provides opportunity for each resident to be supported to develop skills associated with everyday home life - for example, cooking, and grocery shopping, maintaining the home and gardens and inviting friends to visit.

"The move to communitybased living is giving people with disabilities the same rights, opportunities and freedoms as everyone else," she said.

Mr Williams said: "Residents of the Booker Bay home will be able to enhance their everyday home

Lifeline presents suicide intervention session

Lifeline will present a free suicide intervention session at the Peninsula Community Centre on April 11.

The talk, for members of the public, will be a half-day LivingWorks Safetalk presentation, which aims to help people recognise when someone may be considering suicide and how to respond accordingly.

The presentation includes learning how to recognise common tendencies of people experiencing suicidal thoughts, recognition of invitations to help, applying basic techniques to talk and listen, as well as noticing and responding to situations according to community centre operator Coast Community Connections.

The organisation's executive, Ms Theresa Mason, said this initiative aims to provide the community with the essential equip them with resources to assist those who are at risk of suicide.

"Suicide intervention and prevention is an important issue in our community.

"There are many individuals and families who may not be aware of warning signs or don't know how to help someone who is at risk of suicide," said Ms Mason.

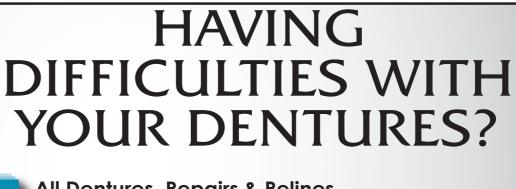

"This presentation will increase attendees' knowledge, confidence and awareness to help them become a vital link in connecting people at risk with further help at home, at work or in the community.

The session will be sponsored by Gosford North Rotary Save our Kids Project and will be run by Lifeline.

Spaces are limited and should be reserved through the community centre, with preference being given to local residents.

awareness session will be presented at the Peninsula Community Centre on March 14 by Lifeline.

The government-sponsored "DV-alert" session will be a two-hour interactive presentation offered to the public at no charge.

The session will give members of the community the opportunity to talk about the issue of domestic violence, according to community centre operator Coast Community Connections.

The organisation's chief executive, Ms Theresa Mason, said that this presentation is an important opportunity for people of the Peninsula community to talk about the issue of domestic violence and discuss what support is available.

"Domestic violence is an important issue in our community that needs to be seriously addressed," said Ms Mason.

"After a devastating loss as a result of domestic violence here on the Peninsula last year, the need for change is more urgent than ever.

"Community members must be brave, speaking out and learning about the signs and forms of domestic violence," she continued.

The Australian Bureau of Statistics reported last year that around one in six women in Australia have experienced physical violence by a partner, with one in 17 men reporting similar incidents.

"If we work together to raise awareness and stand up for victims of domestic violence, we can continue to lower the rate of incidents in our community towards zero.

"This free session will educate attendees on recognising signs of domestic violence and will be an invaluable source of knowledge for Peninsula residents," concluded Ms Mason.

Spaces are limited and should be reserved through the community centre, with preference being given to locals.

Bulk-billing rate rises to 86.6 per cent

The bulk-billing rate for doctors' services in the Robertson electorate has risen to 86.6 per cent in the six months to December.

This was three per cent higher than Labor ever achieved, according to Liberal Member for Robertson Ms Lucy Wicks.

This was equivalent to 72,679 more GP services delivered to locals at no cost, she said.

She said the Government had also tackled the GP shortage on the Peninsula with "funding for a working group to address an urgent need for more local doctors".

"Already, three more doctors are now on the front line, plus another four GP registrars have commenced, with more to come."

She said there were "major

NSW Government upgrades to Gosford Hospital ($348M) and Wyong Hospital ($200M) which are already under construction".

"The Central Coast Medical School and Research Institute is an $85 million collaboration with the NSW Government and University of Newcastle, and includes a $45 million investment from the Federal Government.

"The Coalition has increased funding to Central Coast Hospitals by 64 per cent, to over $220M, since Labor were in Government this means more doctors, more nurses and more services," said Ms Wicks.

Do you ever have the thought that it's all too hard?

Well sometimes, the sheer magnitude of a task can be daunting.

However, breaking it down to small chunks of achievable things is a great way to tackle it.

You know that achieving little goals is a great motivator.

Most people overestimate what they can do, in a big effort, over a week or a month, but underestimate what they can do in a year of consistent correct action.

Losing 30kg of weight is a massive undertaking.

Changing your entire diet or indeed being positive all the time, especially if you are a negative type of person, can be a mammoth undertaking.

However, committing to drinking 6 glasses of water a day, or doing 30 minutes of huffing and puffing, a couple of times a week, might feel more achievable.

If it doesn't feel more achievable, don't give up, try instead 4 glasses of water a day and make the huffing and puffing 20 minutes instead of 30.

Find the balance that will work for you and START there, don't stop.

Make that goal, even if it is 1 glass of water and 5 minutes of movement.

You are now off to a start, something that you can build on.
Small changes will make a big difference, as long as you maintain them.

As soon as you are maintaining your increased effort, make a new goal to work towards.

Instead of thinking that it is all too hard, work on the small changes you can make, that if maintained, will make a difference.

Think about what area of your life you would love to see some improvement in.

Find someone that is already achieving what you would like to

What are they doing?

What small change can you implement in your life that would help move you towards that goal?

Keep a track of your habits.

See how many times you achieve your daily goal, and keep on moving forward in a happy and healthy way, proud of the changes you are making and maintaining.

Please be aware that, poor metabolism due to negative habits, leads to inflammation and can aggravate existing arthritic changes in your spine, and this causes back pain.

On the $\frac{1}{2}$ full glass perspective, the opposite is the case.

Minimal inflammation leads to decreased pain and increased motivation to do better.

For more healthy tips on lifestyle changes you should make, please speak to your chiropractor at your next appointment.

A concept plan for the new natural wood play area

Maintenance work at Woy Woy

A substantial amount of maintenance has been carried out at Woy Woy Public School over the break, according to principal Mr Dan Betts.

"The library, the computer lab, the craft room, two areas in the preschool and 10 classrooms in blocks B and G were painted in a light off-white colour with dark blue/arev trims.

"These areas now look fresh and inviting and both our students and teachers are delighted to be learning in these lovely spaces.

"As well, we had a new roof and gutter system replacement completed for our school hall.

"This has sorted many of our drainage problems around this

"A new vinyl floor was laid in the community room making this room look fresh and new."

Mr Betts said some work was still under way.

"New carpets for some of our administration area, the preschool and our 2K classroom will go in later this term as well," he said.

"The preschool groundwork is "Timber Creations is installing our new natural wood play area, which will transform the side area of our preschool into an exploratory area for our preschool and early intervention students, and for some of the younger students in our disabilities programs classes.

"A mini car-bike track around this play area will be added in crushed, compacted gravel, as well as a yarn up circle, areas of lawn, plants and small group play adventures areas like music walls and water play equipment.

"The front area will then follow.

"There are some problems to solve with the big tree roots first but then you will see a natural sandpit area, tepee sitting area, outdoor kitchen, sensory path area, more paths, lawn and some wooden decking, as well as freestanding activity centres."

Parents told of play equipment ban

Woy Woy Public School has told parents that students must not use the school's play equipment out of school hours, even when under parental supervision.

"We encourage parents to be part of our school community and welcome you onto our site," principal Mr Dan Betts said in a newsletter to parents

"However, parents do not have authority over students during school duty hours from 8:20am or at the time to come onto school grounds to begin school for the day or if waiting for children on site after school.

"While it is nice to socialise on school grounds, it is required that you always abide by school requirements, protocol and The Parent, Carer and Visitor Code of Conduct."

Mr Betts said he written "due to so many students playing on fixed equipment in our school grounds out of school hours even when teachers have asked them not to be on the equipment".

"The school fixed equipment is for school use in school hours only.

"It is used only under teacher supervision and is unsafe for our students otherwise.

"We have had a couple of nasty accidents when students have accessed the equipment before and after school hours without teacher supervision.

"Students have plenty of time during school hours to play on and enjoy this equipment under required teacher supervision.

"Please do not let your child play on this equipment even if you are there.

"It is school equipment and comes under the rules of operation set down by the school and under Health and Safety regulations.

"Authorised personnel must adequately supervise it," Mr Betts

"Signs have been ordered for these equipment areas to further remind everyone that it is not a public park but an area within school grounds and thus operated by the school as it deems necessary.

"When students are on school grounds, they are under the care of school staff.

"Supervision by teachers in our school starts at 8:20am in the morning."

Registered for action against bullying

Ettalong Public School has registered to take part in the National Day of Action Against Bullying.

The day takes place on March 16

"Bullying is the use of force, threat, or coercion to abuse, intimidate or aggressively dominate others," said relieving principal, Ms Lynn Balfour.

"The behaviour is repeated and habitual.

"One essential prerequisite is the perception, by the bully or by others, of an imbalance of social or physical power, which distinguishes bullying from conflict.

Ms Marijke Greenway is bringing her African and Peninsular safaris to life in her latest exhibition

Pearl Beach artist presents wildlife exhibition

Wildlife, the exhibition, will be presented by Pearl Beach artist Ms Marijke Greenway at The Palm House, Sydney Botanic Garden from 10am to 4pm from April 2-20.

Ms Greenway said the inspiration for the pieces that make up the exhibition came from a recent safari holiday.

"We were on safari in Pilanesburg, South Africa, during July last year and with the aid of family photos, I have put together this exhibition," Ms Greenway said.

"It was an awesome experience.

"Nothing quite compares to the adventure of being up close to wild animals in their own environment.

"You shoot many wildlife photos and store amazing memories.

"Living in Australia, there is no need to go on safari.

"Here in Pearl Beach you sometimes see the wildlife almost on the doorstep and numerous birds in the trees.

"Goannas, snakes, brush turkeys and wallabies and even echidnas are quite common," Ms Greenway said.

"This exhibition covers two continents, both of which I have called home.

"Painting it was an enjoyable experience. I just felt that I could not stop

"There was always another one to capture with the brush," Ms Greenway said.

Ms Greenway will also be present throughout the exhibition to discuss the works.

Discount during International Coeliac Week

A Woy Woy cafe is offering coeliac sufferers a discount all of their glutenmenu items during International Coeliac Week.

Ms Ashleigh Fuller, whose parents own and operate BBF Cafe, has had coeliac disease for the past four years and wanted to bring attention to just how difficult it can be to live truly gluten free.

"Coeliac disease is an autoimmune disease that causes a reaction to gluten causing damage to the villi in the small intestine and bowel," Ms Fuller said.

It is a disease that can often be hard to diagnose so sufferers can go a long time before receiving the true diagnosis usually suffering through a range of symptoms, such as vomiting, stomach cramps, ulcers and fatigue, until coeliac treatment and prevention is prescribed.

It has no cure and is instead managed by a lifelong commitment to a gluten-free diet.

"I have had Coeliac's for four years and it has completely changed the way I live my life," Ms Fuller said

"My family and I had to learn how to keep things separate, identify what foods are gluten free, learn how to read labels, eat differently to what everyone else can, take my own food places, not eat takeaway and generally miss out on a lot.

"It is really hard to understand Coeliac at first.

"You don't think wheat, rye, barely and oats are in sauces, soup, spices, or ice cream but they

"Having this disease teaches you to be aware of everything you put in your body," Ms Fuller said.

"Food plays such a big part in our day to day lives but also in our social and cultural make up too.

"I think eating out is the hardest thing for me, as most restaurants cafes know gluten-free don't understand cross contamination," Ms Fuller said.

This is what inspired Ms Fuller and BBF to offer their special discount to Coeliac sufferers this Coeliac Week.

"We have a dedicated team who all know the importance of food handling, understand the risks of cross contamination and have a fully-stocked kitchen with separate utensils and preparation areas for gluten free items.

"All of our menu items are also available gluten-free, bar one item," Ms Fuller said.

"I really hope this week can highlight and celebrate coeliac sufferers as they deserve recognition of how far they have come but also to make people aware of how serious autoimmune diseases are and how they can just suddenly affect anybody," she

Aron Sherriff moves to Queensland

Ettalong bowler Aron Sherriff has moved to Queensland to play for the Helensvale Club.

Bowls Central Coast farewelled Sherriff at their presentation night and named him the Central Coast Bowler of the Year on January 20.

Last year, Sherriff claimed the Premier League Title for the third consecutive year in a row, took out the State Singles Title and was named the Australian Singles Champion.

He has also been named to the Australian Commonwealth Games team for the third time and is gearing up for the April Games.

Sherriff said the move had been something he had been considering for some time.

He said that a desire to play with old friends who were members of Helensvale Club and the needs of his family helped make the decision.

"My kids are sort of on the cusp of that age where if we left the move any later it'd be harder for them to adjust," Sherriff said.

"Mark Casey, Brett Wilkie and Nathan Rice, who I played with throughout my international career, are all members of Helensvale and I'm excited to get back on the green with them in preparation for the Games," Sherriff said.

During his time with Ettalong, the club rose to prominence amongst the region's bowling clubs and won numerous titles, including securing the NSW Championships for the past four years.

Central Coast Newspapers has a very liberal credit policy for advertisers and realises that from time to time, people, businesses and organisations get into financial difficulty and may need assistance and time to get things back on track. However, some people, businesses and organisations take advantage of this generosity they use advertising but simply don't pay their account after several months and need to be taken to court to do so. From time to time, as necessary, we will name these people, businesses or organisations as a warning to our readers so that they will be wary when dealing with them. Sunset Decks

Social club donates to Woy Woy Juniors

Woy Woy Leagues Social Club has donated $1000 to the Juniors club and has called for donations of clean old boots for the junior club.

The cheque was formally presented to fundraising coordinator Ms Kate Hall by social club vice-president Mr Brian (Rusty) Caitlin at the Leagues Club the next afternoon.

The call for donated boots came after Juniors representative Ms Kristy Donnelly told the club one of the biggest costs for a family was the purchase of boots.

Newly-appointed Leagues Club manager Mr Craig Fairweather has made the club available to be a central depository for old, clean pairs of boots.

"If you have a pair in a bottom cupboard or somewhere please help a buddy player by dropping them off at the club," said Social Club events co-ordinator Ms Rose McGivney.

"Juniors are the life-blood of any sport and your support will help ease the financial burden on some families," she said.

When our immune system is working properly, we don't even notice it. But when we have an under or overactive immune system, we are at greater risk of developing infections and other health conditions. With the weather getting cooler, it's a great time to start boosting your immunity to keep you healthy through the cold and flu seasons.

3. Think about your gut

Good gut health can make all the difference in staying healthy throughout the cold and flu season. Investing in a daily probiotic can help rebalance the gut in favour of good bacteria so harmful bacteria are outnumbered. Your digestive tract contains 70% of your body's immune system so it's really important to keep it healthy. Additionally eating naturally rich probiotic gut friendly foods, such as kombucha, kimchi, yogurt, kefir and sauerkraut, are also great for your tum!

1. Get your flu shot

Cold & Flu season is quickly approaching! Pop into your local YouSave Chemist for your flu shot before winter arrives. Available in selected stores only.

2. Start boosting your immunity

As the air gets cooler, Autumn is the best time to start boosting your immune system in preparation for the colder months ahead. Daily vitamins that can assist in strengthening your immune system include zinc, echinacea, turmeric and olive leaf extract.

4. Get some sleep

We all lead busy lives and getting enough sleep can be very challenging at times. 7-8 hours of sleep a day allows you to maintain a strong immune system, giving your body time to recover and rebuild. Avoiding cigarettes and alcohol before bed will also help maximise your sleep quality. If you have trouble sleeping, try switching off all electronic devices at least 1 hour before your bedtime and also avoid coffee or drinks with caffeine at least 3 hours before bed.
